'LADY LOU' SCORES IN THE RUFF

The Mae West (or Lady Lou, as the French call it) touch is seen in even the high-styled fashions this autumn. To accompany a handsome black velvet dress, Suzanne Talbot creates some glamorous long black velvet gloves with ruffs of black ostrich around their tops. She adds a ruff of the black ostrich to muffle the throat. And the chic little black high-hat

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Should we do a lot of explaining when we tell a child to do something or not to do it? Should we go into details about reasons, why he should obey and why we command him?

No.
I don't give a snap of my fingers for the child who has to be harangued and coaxed before he makes up his mind to do what he's told.

Give me the boy or girl who would jump into a tar barrel if his parents gave the order.

Thus committing myself, I shall have to explain.

In the first place, the parent a child obeys is the parent he trusts.
I don't mean the humoring parent, either, the one who never gives an order that will interfere with his child's pleasure. I mean the parent whom the boy or girl recognizes as having sense and judgment and he respects. A spoiled child does not have this feeling.
He may obey, but this is because he knows he will never be told to do what he doesn't want to.

Necessity for Obedience

In the next place, you may be thinking, why do I say this when I have written many times about the wisdom of talking to children and explaining why such and such a thing must be done. Why do I about face now and cry out for unquestioning obedience?

It is not hard to reconcile the
two. The one is the foundation for the other. I think every human being has to have ingrained in his character the necessity of absolute obedience to something. Every one of us is obeying one or a hundred laws every day. The sooner we learn that lesson the better.

Then and then only are we ready for and entitled to an explanation of new laws as they come along, or anything unusual that taxes our convenience.

It isn't so much the fact that a good child will obey implicitly that counts, as the state of mind that acknowledges law as it is.

Now we come to the big objection to this "unquestioning obedience" matter; that such children are cowed, lose their spirit and self-reliance and never make new tracks for themselves. I acknowledge this, too.

Gain Child's Confidence.

It is true that the child who can't call his soul his own often turns out to be a spineless creature, or a fraidy-cat, or, if he has it in him, sometimes he becomes a rebellious outlaw altogether.

Just the same if a child is allowed to grow up obeying no law
but himself, he is going to his ruin
as surely as a wild colt in a bar-
wire entanglement.

Parents should inculcate in every child one fundamental idea, "We must be obeyed." But at the same time they must show the child
that they are reasonable, square,
and human—and gain his faith,
love and confidence. Also there are sure to be times when it is much the best policy to explain
"why" to a child, and to show him how matters stand. I like this very much. Children are keen.
They have sense. They easily see
the justice of things.

But too few of our children have any real idea what the word
"must" means. And no mortal on earth will have read grit or backbone 'till he learns it.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

The Right Way to Use Cosmetics

By Alicia Hart

Don't let the use of one wrong cosmetic defeat the purpose of the right ones.

Mostly beauty preparations have to be used in conjunction—with some others. And one won't do any good unless you follow it up with another preparation designed to go with it.

For instance, pore cream will do very little good unless you use an astringent or skin toning lotion, too.

Nor will muscle oils strengthen the muscles of your chin if they are applied without a patting treatment.

You can get a ready-made patter, or you can make one yourself
by fastening soft cotton pads over the end of a shoe tree. Smear a little muscle oil on your chin and then pat it in with the pater.

It is usually a good idea to use
one brand of cosmetics and skin
preparations. Mixing several brands on your face may not work
at all.

Cosmeticians have realized
more and more that no woman wants to buy large containers of a product until they have tried it.
Consequently, you can get complete sets of lotions and creams put up in little-larger-than-amiples jars. These give you a chance to find out what you are using before investing in more expensive,
full-size jars.

THE UNKNOWN BLONDE

BY LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

(All Rights Reserved).

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

On a stormy November evening DAVID BANNISTER meets a pretty blond girl and offers her a lift in the cab in which he is riding. Her hands open and he sees a revolver inside.

Next morning Bannister reads that TRACY KING, orchestra leader in a movie theatre, has been found dead in his apartment. Police are searching for an "unknown blond" who visited King the night before. Bannister, remembering the girl in the taxi, is puzzled.

He sees her again that morning. The girl tells him her name is JULIET FRANCES and that she knows nothing of the murder. She begs Bannister to help her and he agrees. He goes to see his old friend, JIM PAXTON, editor of the Tremont Post.

CHAPTER VI

Jim Paxton's face lighted as he saw the figure in the doorway. "Hello there!" he exclaimed. "Glad you came around." Paxton put aside the cigar he had been chewing and leaned back in his chair. "Lord!" he sighed. "What a morning!"

Bannister sauntered to a chair beside the editor's desk. The desk itself was piled high with a litter of newspapers, galley proofs, large manilla envelopes and a stack of letters that had not been opened.

"How much did you lose last night?" Bannister demanded.

"Oh, it isn't that. I followed your example and went home early," Paxton assured him. "but I've been down here since six o'clock. That blasted murder last night hit us in a bad way. The Times had all the best of it, of course, coming out this morning. Did a good job, too."

The Times was Tremont's only morning newspaper but the same publishers issued the evening News-Press. Against such opposition the Post had prospered but it was a continuous fight.

"It hit us in a bad way," Paxton repeated. "Kennedy, the city editor, is laid up in a hospital and his assistant is a new one. Only been on the job two months. Besides that," he frowned, raising his two hands in a gesture of defenselessness, "we're short-handed. One man off on a late vacation and another quit without notice. There are a couple of youngsters filling in but they don't know what it's all about!"

"What's new on the murder?" Bannister asked.

"Nothing—apparently. I guess they're still looking for the mysterious blond. More promises that they'll have her at headquarters 'within 24 hours.' Say, it's a whole of a story, isn't it? You don't know what a sensation that crooning orchestra leader has been in this town! Girls and women all crazy about him. Sending him letters and cakes and all sorts of presents. Asking for autographed pictures. Why, our telephone operator's eyes are red and swollen and they say one of the girls in the business office has been crying half the morning—"

"Must have been popular," Bannister agreed shortly.

"Popular's no word for it! And then there's the society angle—his engagement to Denise Lang, the richest girl in Tremont. Why, it's the sort of story that doesn't break once in five years and," bitterly, "we don't even start on it before the Times has cleaned up!"

"I wouldn't say it was cleaned up," Bannister commented. "Not until they find out who killed him."

"Oh, no, of course I didn't mean that. But the Times had the whole story—all anyone's been able to get so far. If Kennedy were only here or I had two more reporters—"

Bannister had been sitting with his chair tipped back. He brought the two front legs of the chair to the floor now, straightened and said quietly, "You want more reporters, do you? Well, I'll take the job."

"You'll take it?"

Bannister nodded. "I'd like to take a fling at it," he said. "Remember what we were talking about last night—about the thrills and excitement we used to have? Well, I'm bored. I've been bored for months. Haven't a thing to do with myself or my time. Here a cracking good murder breaks and I'd like to get in on it. Maybe it's because I'm back in Tremont—"

"Why, Lord love you, Dave! You don't mean you want to be a reporter on the Post again, do you?"

"Why not?" Bannister was talking eagerly now. "I'd like to find out who killed Tracy King—and why. Oh, I don't suppose I'll be much help to you! Probably I'm stale; been out of harness too long. But I can do leg work. I'd like to be on the inside of a murder story once more and see the wheels go around. I used to have a pretty good standing with McNeal and I'll bet I still know half the force—"

"Go to it!" Paxton told him curtly. "There was never a better police reporter in Tremont than you were, Dave. Maybe you'll get some ideas you can use in a novel."

"Yes, and maybe I'll get my neck broken," Suddenly Dave Bannister grinned. "This is going to be fun! Going to be—"

"He stopped. "There's one thing," he said, "I don't want to cut in on any of your boys. I mean whoever is handling the story. Your man can write all the by-lies stories. All I want to do is work with him. Whatever I get I'll turn over for him to write—"

Ten minutes later Paxton and Bannister were in the city room—the same large, square city room, scarcely changed, where Bannister had worked years before. The city desk was set at a different angle. Bannister recognized none of the men gathered around it. Desks and cabinets covered most of the floor space. They had been rearranged, too, but the room had the same air of activity, of disorder and preoccupation that he remembered. From beyond came the muffled roaring and whining and grinding of machines. "Oh, it was all quite familiar."

But the faces of the men and women about the room were different. Paxton strode a few steps forward, then called, "Oh—Galney? Got a moment?"

Down came the outspread pages of a newspaper. Down came the tipped-back chair. A young man with a brown felt hat tipped back at a rakish angle upon a head of very red hair emerged from behind the newspaper. He crushed out his cigarette and got to his feet.

"Yes, Mr. Paxton," said J. Randolph Galney. "Sure! Is there anything—"

He did not finish the sentence. A pair of eyes of unusual blueness searched Paxton's. J. Randolph Galney was slender and slightly below average height. His cheeks and the ridge of his nose were amply sprinkled with the freckles that so often accompany red hair and a fair skin. J. Randolph Galney was 22 years old but he had packed into those 22 years a list of activities that was amazing. Confidence and energy he never lacked. One subject, and only one, was there on which J. Randolph Galney was susceptible to the world's darts and that, at least in the office of the newspaper, was unguessed. No one on the Post knew that the "J" in the wirey little reporter's name stood for Jeremiah. No one would ever know it if it were possible for J. Randolph Galney to prevent it.

"Galney," Jim Paxton was saying, "this is Mr. Bannister—David Bannister. Used to work here. Since then he's been to New York and written some novels and made a name for himself. Been to Mexico, too, and Hollywood and I don't know where all."

A cheerful grin overspread the reporter's face. "Sure," he said. "I saw the picture they made from 'Cheerful Liar.' Called it 'Slave of Desire,' didn't they? It was a good picture, too. I heard that you were in Tremont—"

"Wait a minute," Paxton said. "I'd better get Austin."

Austin was the assistant city editor, carrying on in place of his chief.

In another moment the four men stood together while Paxton explained Bannister's status as a sort of ex-officio member of the staff. Austin was nodding understandingly and Galney looked perplexed. Some of this perplexity faded as Paxton repeated, "It's still your story, Galney. Bannister's not to write any of the copy. He's to work with you, take part of the burden. Who's down at headquarters now, by the way?"

"Cunningham," Austin informed him.

"I came in to write the lead," Galney explained. He glanced at the clock on the opposite wall—a quick, nervous glance. "Guess I'd better be getting back," he went on.

"Bannister will go with you," Paxton spoke tersely. "And see if you can't get something this time! Make Henley talk. He must have something he's holding back! Try to get the description of that girl they're looking for. How do they expect to find her if they don't let us know what she looks like? For God's sake, give us something new for the final—"

A telephone shrilled, interrupting. A loud voice called, "Austin! It's Cunningham on the wire. From headquarters!"

The assistant city editor ran to the desk and picked up the instrument. "Hello, hello!" he said nervously. "Yes—this is Austin."

The others drifted nearer, as though drawn by an irresistible force. Now Austin was pulling copy paper toward him, one hand

"DEMANDING BY MENACES" ALLEGED

London, Nov. 29. Clarence Guy Gordon Haddon, consulting engineer, who recently returned from China, was formally remanded in custody until December 4. Bail was refused.

Chief Inspector Foster stated that when told of the charge, Haddon replied: "This is the only thing I wanted. I don't see why I should be hounded about for being the illegitimate son of the Duke of Clarence."

Later, Haddon denied the charge, but admitted he had made a petition to the King.

NEW CHILDREN'S COURT IN ENGLAND

NO DOCK, NO WITNESS BOX, NO NONSENSE, BUT CONSIDERABLE HUMANITY

By J. L. HODSON

Justice, tempered with true kindness. No nonsense, but considerable humanity. That was my impression of the first court which sat under the new Children's Act at Islington Town Hall.

The court was not much like a court. No dock, no witness box. The two magistrates, Mr. John H. Harris, of Thames Police Court, who, with his aquiline features, might be a parson or a school master, and Mrs. Girling, a former Mayress of Shorelitch (a woman must be on the Bench) sat at a horse-shoe table.

Evidence was given from a "lectern" by (in one instance) a policeman in brown shoes and blue overcoat.

On one side of the room sat County Council special officers, men of dignity and middle-age, and on the other probation officers of the girl guide leader or scout-master type.

The Health Factor

Mr. Harris said in some opening remarks that the Court started a new era. The incident that struck me most was when he told a girl's mother: "Your child's teeth want attending to. Health has very often a great deal to do with it, you know."

He pointed out to another parent that her daughter had a flat foot, and that one of her eyes was defective. It will be customary under this new Act, I gather, for the magistrates to inform the parents of defects disclosed by the medical report. It is an important innovation.

Another is that a parent or guardian must be present in Court and has power to cross-examine witnesses.

Three Boys in a Kiosk

The first case was of three boys charged with stealing from a telephone kiosk an earpiece, diaphragm, washer and screw, worth 4d. "Were you in this?" asked the clerk (a friendly young man hardly out of his twenties) of one boy, obviously endeavouring to make him feel at home; and when Mr. Harris spoke to them he used their christened names.

The spokesman said they entered the kiosk to have a bit of fun—telephone the operator and ask him the time.

Mr. Harris: But that would cost you twopenny.

The boy: Oh no you dial O. But it wouldn't work.

The magistrates decided there was no evidence of stealing. "Now you three lads were extremely stupid," said Mr. Harris. "It is poor fun for the clerk at the other end of the telephone who is busy all day answering calls. Go away and keep out of telephone boxes."

Two girls who had been found guilty of stealing from Woolworth's came into the room next. What troubled Mr. Harris gravely was that although it was plain, he said, that they had worked together, each had since said: "It wasn't me, it was the other girl." "It is a rotten thing to go and say that," he said. "Far better to be straightforward." He spoke as an indignant parent speaks when rebuking his children.

The girls he admonished severely; and if they "did it again" they would be "sent away." But they must forget about the case. The probation officer would look after them. "She will make a friend of you, if you will make a friend of her."

A Difficult Problem

The third boy was a more difficult problem: he had stolen wages, and taken a trip to the Isle of Wight. This boy had been stealing since 10 years old; was under average intelligence.

The mother, with whom Mr. Harris discussed the case, thought, with him, her son would be better away at "a school," and to a school he was sent.

Formerly, I understand, it was usual to fix a term of three years, or until the age of 19 was reached. Now the period is to be left to the discretion of the headmaster of the school and the Secretary of State.

REPLY TO CRITICS

N.S.P.C.C. & Safeguards for Parents

Answers to criticisms of the new Children and Young Persons Act were given by officials of the N.S.P.C.C. at a luncheon, under the chairmanship of Lord Ullswater, at the Savoy Hotel recently.

The Act gives power to local authorities, constables or authorised persons (the Society's inspectors come under this category) to bring children before special courts if they are in bad association, moral danger, or beyond control.

The magistrates are empowered to take a child from the custody of its parents and place it in custody of an approved school or relative, or under supervision at home, without any criminal charge being made.

Mr. Frank Whitbread, vice-chairman of the Society, made it clear that the N.S.P.C.C. regarded the Act as a great advance. If the Society had not been satisfied that there were obvious safeguards against the parents being arbitrarily deprived of their children, they would have opposed it.

These safeguards he enumerated as the right of immediate appeal from the Children's Courts to the Quarter Sessions, and the subjection of magistrates' decisions to Home Office supervision.

Mr. William J. Elliott, the director of the Society, said there was no intention of flooding the new courts with cases. Proceedings were held in camera only to ensure a degree of intimacy in the child's interest.

Mr. Elliott admitted that the cost of appeal to the Quarter Sessions would be at least £20, a sum prohibitive in the case of poor families. There was still, he pointed out, direct access to the Home Secretary, and he gave an assurance that the Home Office paid every attention to such letters.

FLYING CLUBS IN INDIA

SET-BACK IN LAHORE

Bombay. Flying is still in its infancy in India.

The number of flying clubs in India is about a dozen or even less. The Bombay Flying Club is just five years old and has a membership of only 270, according to the latest annual report of the Club.

The operations of the Club during the year under review resulted in a loss of Rs. 4,656 (over £350/-). Nevertheless, Bombay is carrying on enthusiastically.

Laurel, on the other hand, has done with flying, at any rate for the present.

The Punjab Flying Club is under liquidation and its affairs have come up before the High Court.

Justice Bakshi Tekchand was told that Rs. 4,000 (£300/-) had been spent on fees.

"That's why the Club has gone into liquidation," said Justice Tekchand amidst laughter.

More than Rs. 1,000 (£75/-) had been "wasted" on advertisements, said a member of the Club.

Allegations of mismanagement were made in the open court, according to the Lahore correspondent of the Evening News.—Reuter.

MODERN COURAGE

THE KING AND THE V.C.

London. The fact that the King himself examines every recommendation for the award of the Victoria Cross was revealed by Lord Harewood, husband of the Princess Royal, at the second re-union of Yorkshire V.C.s at Beoston, Leeds.

Lord Harewood said that the reason why the V.C. had remained ahead of all other honours was because its award was so rare and was made only after the strictest scrutiny.

He was glad to be able to say that personal courage was alive today, but the amount of courage and self-sacrifice needed to win the Victoria Cross was exceptional and rare. It had been even more difficult to win the V.C. in the Great War than in previous wars.

A number of officials scrutinised every case of recommendation for the coveted Cross, and then it went before the King in person.

The King himself, Lord Harewood added, had told him that he personally examined every recommendation before he allowed it to go through.

"He is very jealous, if I may say so," said Lord Harewood, "to guard the Cross with great care."

"It has become the fashion in modern times to look upon personal courage as a virtue of comparatively little importance; in fact there is even a school, which seems to consider personal courage as almost a vice," he continued. "But I am glad to think that it is a very small section, although it is loud-voiced."

Lord Harewood declared that he was certain that 999 men out of 1,000, if asked what honour they would have above all others, would choose the Victoria Cross.—Reuter.

BREACH SUIT AGAINST AN M.P.

MR. R. PURBRICK

An action in which Mrs. Kathleen Olive Pinder Thompson, of Upper Berkeley-street, W., is suing Mr. Reginald Purbrick, Conservative M.P. for the Walton Division of Liverpool, for alleged breach of contract and alleged breach of promise, appears in the special jury list for early hearing at the Law Courts.

Mr. Norman Birkett, K.C., and Mr. Gilbert Balfour, K.C., instructed by Messrs. Michael Abrahamson, Sons and Company, have been briefed by Mrs. Thompson.

Sir Patrick Hastings, K.C., and Mr. Harold Murphy, instructed by Messrs. Oswald-Hickson, Collier and Co., will appear for Mr. Purbrick.

Mr. Purbrick, who was born in Melbourne 56 years ago, has represented the Walton Division of Liverpool since 1929. As a young man in Australia he was amateur boxer and walking champion. He is a keen sportsman, and his yacht Zara is well known in yachting circles.

EMPIRE TRADE AND ECONOMICS

Advocates of closer Imperial economic and trade relations have an ardent supporter in Mr. Stanley Bruce, the High Commissioner for Australia in London, who comes out with a strong plea for greater co-operation than has resulted from the Ottawa Conference. There is no denying the fact that the Ottawa discussions and decisions have not turned out to be so advantageous as was anticipated, due to a variety of circumstances which need not at the moment be outlined. Nor can it be doubted that, given the will, Britain, the Dominions and some of the Colonial Empire could achieve an economic union which would be productive of much mutual benefit all round. As Mr. Bruce pointedly declares, the Mother Country possesses a valuable home market, great supplies of capital and unrivalled experience, while the Dominions and other parts of the overseas Empire have the resources which Britain herself lacks. Co-operative effort, well planned to meet the needs of each and all, could undoubtedly produce results. With world depression still making its effects keenly felt, it is natural that there should be this inclination to turn attention to the possibilities of closer and more effective Imperial relationships. The Times recently suggested that Britain could not wait indefinitely on the permission of other nations to set her own house and the Empire in order, while General Smuts, in complete contrast to his address at the opening of the World Economic Conference, has since declared that progress might be easier, even in respect of world co-operation, if, in the first instance, radical reforms were begun in and confined to already existing economic units and regions. There is something in the contention that a start within the Empire might, in course of time, be reflected in improved world trade generally, although the point must not be lost sight of that, once real Empire became an accomplished fact and showed results, there would be a tendency for it to become crystallised into something like permanency. If, however, the movement is to be seriously considered, something more than mutual tariff concessions and trade agreements will be necessary. The financial factor can-

NOTES OF THE DAY

BRITISH AIR POWER

The debate on British air power is the culmination of one of the most vigorous political campaigns of recent years. And what is more, the Government can offer little defence to the demand for a considerable strengthening of Britain's military air power. The unrest in Europe has brought the issue to a head, but there are other factors which have played their part, including the recent combined air and naval manoeuvres in the North Sea and the realisation that Britain can no longer regard itself as an island separated from the Continent. Air development has renewed all that.

PLANES OR WARSHIPS?

What has yet to be determined, however, is the relative importance of the air force, the navy and the army in any modern scheme of defence. The issue is now raised very definitely, namely, can even the best modern warship withstand attack from the air? Has the aeroplane beaten the warship? There is a growing school of thought fully convinced that this represents the truth of the situation, and it is natural that they should point to the fact that 600 planes, including 300 torpedo-carrying machines, could be constructed at the cost of one H.M.S. Rodney. Expert opinion is that even a squadron of warships could not withstand the attacks of such a fleet. Hence yesterday's spirited debate. It is at once obvious that greater air power is essential to British defensive equanimity and that a large programme of naval building must be embarked on with the greatest caution. The aeroplane will certainly out the submarine in importance in coastal defence schemes.

HOLLAND AND LEAGUE

Holland for many years has made itself the spokesman of the smaller powers at all League of Nations Conferences. It was Holland, for instance, that was the protagonist of the League Covenant during the Manchurian crisis. It is Holland that has always stood out for real limitation and reduction of armaments as an outcome of the Disarmament Conference. It was Holland that proposed the Tariff Truce and has always been a supporter of free trade by the removal of artificial barriers to the flow of commerce. If it was also Holland that took the first step in the destruction of the Truce she cannot well be blamed after the complete failure of the World Economic Conference.

OUTSPOKEN COMMENT

And that the Dutch Government does not speak for itself alone but has the backing of the nation is shown by recent editorial comment in the New Rotterdam Courier. "What must strike public opinion," it writes, "each time that important questions are discussed, is the stubborn egotism of certain nations, and notably of the Great Powers, who prevent the conclusion of the very agreements whose pressing need they continually proclaim." This tendency the paper goes on to remark was manifest at the World Economic Conference "where everybody knew exactly what his neighbour ought to do—which was precisely that which they did not dare to undertake themselves!" Turning to Disarmament in a deliciously cynical passage, the Courier declares that "States are always ready to abolish those categories of armaments which they do not themselves possess. They are afraid to take risks and seem to be entirely oblivious of having foretold that a failure of the Conference would produce disastrous results."

TRUE PRINCIPLES

"The fact is that the world is full of reformers who know exactly what everybody else ought to do to make life happier and more secure. But they are mysteriously missing when there is any talk of applying those principles to themselves." Home truths from small Powers can sometimes be very salutary and we could do with more of them. Those who have great riches find it hard to see clearly. To the little nations, the League is a definite life-line of safety. Its Covenant stands between them and absorption by bigger and stronger nations. Herein lies the strength of Geneva, and herein is a most salutary means of keeping true principles constantly before the Great Powers who are immediately prepared to compromise on them in face of unexpected developments.

not be overlooked. There must be something like central control of finance, so that money may be directed into useful channels instead of being merely profitably employed for the benefit of the banks. In a word, State control of banking would appear to be a necessity. Given that, and a determination to secure maximum results from co-operative effort, economic imperialism might easily be realised, to the mutual benefit of all parties.

SAINT ANDREW:

A SCOTTISH STORY OF HIS LIFE

IN the University Library, Cambridge, is housed an ancient Scottish manuscript which, even though it has been included in the publications of the Scottish Text Society since 1896, does not appear to be familiar to any except a small company of scholars.

This document consists of a series of lives of the saints and apostles and is couched in rhymed Scots of the fourteenth century, that older dialect which, with all its remoteness, bears a closer resemblance to the modern Scottish tongue than the later phrases of Dunbar or Douglas. It is manifestly drawn from "The Golden Legend," as its writer admits, but who that writer was, save that he was an ecclesiastic and well stricken in years, internal or other evidence fails to enlighten us.

But the individual point of interest is that the manuscript contains the only account of the legend of Saint Andrew, the patron Saint of Scotland, which has come down to us in the Scottish tongue. As such it should be infinitely precious and a brief resume of the legend it narrates may possibly induce the reader to seek out the volumes containing it and peruse it in the original for himself—a task not too difficult for anyone who has a smattering of Scots and a little Chaucerian lore, especially if he lean on the ample glossary provided by the learned editor.

St. Andrew, says our anonymous author, whose rude rhymes scarcely constitute even an attempt at tolerable versifications, was the brother of St. Peter, and after the dispersion of the apostles, took his way to Nischnia or Nicaea, but was commanded by an angel to proceed to Murgundy, a town of the anthropophagi or man-eaters, for the purpose of relieving. Saint Matthew, who had been blinded and imprisoned there. Taking ship, he duly arrived in that country, to find that Matthew's sight and liberty had been miraculously restored to him.

EVIL SPIRITS BANISHED.

His preaching of the Gospel in Murgundy aroused the enmity of its barbarous inhabitants, who seized and scourged him well-nigh to death. But the saint, through his piety and prayers, converted thousands to the Christian faith. Thence he passed to Antioch, where he wrought many miracles, and even the idol of the goddess Diana testified to the efficacy of the faith he inculcated, assuring her suppliants that she had no power to aid them, but that Saint Andrew would "help them secretly."

Perhaps the most notable among the saint's miraculous deeds was the casting out of seven fierce fiends at Nicaea, to which he had retraced his steps. These evil spirits haunted a highway in the vicinity of the town, appearing in the form of hounds, as did so many medieval demons, and attacking and slaying passers-by. Confronted by the saint, they assumed a meekness which surprised the onlookers, and, at his bidding, immediately vanished, to the great edification of all present.

But when Andrew passed to another city he found that the banished demons had gone there before him, and had slain a young man of the place, whom, out of his pity, the Saint raised up from the dead.

The next miracle, or "ferlie," as our rhyming biographer terms it, in which the Saint engaged was the restoration to life of forty men who, coming by sea to hear his doctrines, had been drowned in a tempest raised by the foul fiend, and their bodies cast on the shore, where they were restored by his prayers.

Sailing to Achaia, or Greece, the apostle—for he was the first who had been called to that divine office by the Redeemer—engaged in the conversion of its inhabitants, baptising, among others, the wife of a certain Egeus, who, in revenge, persecuted the converts Andrew had made. Confronted by the Saint, he was admonished and enjoined to give up the worship of idols, which are "bot fiendis" of which man must beware. The exhortation embraces a touching and almost eloquent account of the Last Supper and the betrayal by Iscariot, which owes not a little of its serene beauty to the simplicity of the old Scots in which it is couched.

But Egeus was contumacious, and all Saint Andrew's divinely inspired arguments failing to move him, he cast the apostle into prison, whence he was taken for trial and was condemned to death.

He was bound to a cross with cords, and it is interesting to note, in view of the particular form of the cross we now call a "Saint Andrew's" or decussate cross, that its precise shape is not mentioned in this Scottish account. At the height of his agony a divine light descended from above and enveloped him about, until he yielded up the ghost.

Even after his death the apostle continued to work miracles, protecting a certain bishop from the temptations of a demon in the form of a fair lady.

A NAVAL FLAG.

It is, indeed, remarkable that this long poem of over 1,100 lines makes no mention of Saint Andrew's association with Scotland as the patron Saint, a circumstance that could not fail to have been within the knowledge of its compiler. The national predilection for this Saint seems to have been very much more ancient than his official adoption as patron of the Scottish Kingdom. In the Irish Book of Leinster he is compared with Saint Columba, and as his attributes are practically identical with those of that Saint, this may account for his great popularity with our fathers.

Saint Andrew was the apostle of Scythia, and the Scots, or "Scutis," were anciently confounded or associated with the Scythian race. In Germany he is symbolically connected with the dog, which seems to throw some light on the legend of his exorcism of the demonic hounds.

The decussate cross of Saint Andrew, employed as an ensign, did not come into general use until the fifteenth century, when it was flown almost entirely as a naval flag. Many of the old views of the harbour of Leith represent it as sheltering vessels all of which fly the Saint Andrew's Cross. It is the popular as apart from the Royal standard of Scotland, but not the slightest proof exists that it is of older provenance than the lion rampant, the legend of the Pictish King Hungus notwithstanding.—LEWIS SPENCE.

"We was happy together—a little tiff now and then. But I always waited till she hit me first."

The Very Idea!

WHAT DID WE DO IN THE GREAT WAR?

By Maj. Gen. Edward Kelly.

"SHUN!" We leapt smartly to attention, awaying slightly from side to side, until our body had recovered from the momentum.

Our hat fell off with the sudden shock, but we didn't care. Our hair was parted solidly with grease and our fingers were stretched along the seams of our pants.

We allowed a faint, cynical smile to play along our lips. Nothing ostentatious—just one of those smiles that make girls fall for us.

Ah! This was LIFE Working for our King and Country. Taking our part in the defence system of our grand and glorious Empire. Enduring the same hardships that our brave Tommies underwent in the Great War.

We are referring, of course, to the fact that we were at Fanning camp last week-end.

We threw our shoulders back, and allowed another faint smile to flit across our features.

Away from the irksome office routine, we felt a new man. Let them bring out our enemies. We

"Private Kelly!!!" boomed a voice, "Whoresyter! Pickitup-man! Don't stand there mooning like an ape. An' wipe that silly grin off your face."

We retrieved our hat, and regained our stance, a little shaken.

"Feet pointing outwards to an angle of 45°!" roared the same obnoxious voice, and our feet painfully described the requisite arc. Ingrowing toenails and corns placed at strategic points did not help.

However, it's all in the life of a warrior, we thought, and gave our a surreptitious scratch in the rear-guard.

After all, soldiers must put up with some discomforts. Our only regret was that it would all end to-morrow. If only we could fight. Our manly bosom.

"Coooooompan-y-y r-l-g-h-t t'n!"

"We completed—the difficult manoeuvre with dignity, thanks to a kindly kick on the ankle from our neighbour.

"Quuu-u-e-e-c-k MARCH!"

We stepped off briskly with our left foot, and, excepting that we dropped our rifle, trod on the heel of the fool in front, and had the silly cow behind trod on ours, went through the evolution with precision.

The man's voice was growing monotonous.

"We came to some rice paddies. After a time there were some more rice paddies, followed by rice paddies.

Our feet grew tired. War was brutal, and called forth all the baser instincts in Man. We wished

After an indeterminate time the Camp moved into sight. We crawled along, the stock of the rifle joggling into our skinned shoulder with each step.

"Sq—u-a-a, 'ALT!"

The ranks staidied, and we curled our toes up in our boots, seeking relief from the burning sensation.

"That's all now, men. We'll do another route march this afternoon," said the same abominable Voice.

A shudder momentarily convulsed the ranks, and strong men, shuddered.

One unit looked up at the sky and hoped it would rain.

We were dismissed, and crawled wearily away to our tents.

"Old Soldiers Never Die—" sang a raucous voice in a neighbouring tent.

Soldiers? BAH!

was to-day the fifth only of the world air Powers in terms of first line strength.

All countries had not made public statements of their current strength, but the official figures were available for France and Britain.

THE FIGURES.

In Britain's case, the figure was approximately 850 aeroplanes. In the French air force, the corresponding figure was about 1,650.

According to available information, the Soviet Republic figure was between 1,400 and 1,500, the United States between 1,000 and 1,100, Italy between 1,000 and 1,100.

It was clear that Britain's example had unhappily elicited no response whatever in any quarter of the world. This was, therefore, a path which could no longer be followed and they must, however reluctantly, abandon the policy of unilateral disarmament which in the present unfortunate state of international affairs, it was manifestly not only useless but even dangerous to pursue further.

NO NEW POLICY.

That did not mean that a new policy would guide them, for the Government had made it plain in their successive pronouncements at Geneva that they recognised the need for a one-power standard in the air for this country. The earnestness of their desire to achieve effective disarmament in air had been abundantly proved by their approach to this problem and they had offered to go to any length if other nations would do the same. They had, indeed, stated their willingness to consent to the complete abolition of military and naval aviation, provided only there could be devised an effective scheme for the international control of civil aviation, which would prevent all possibility of the misuse of civil aircraft for military purposes.

OUTLOOK NOT GOOD.

It now appeared that there were nations which were not prepared to agree to such abolition and it was impossible to deny that there were great practical difficulties in the way of such a far-reaching measure. But Britain could not accept the continuance of her present inferiority.

If parity could not be secured by reductions elsewhere, then the converse of the proposition must follow and there would be no option but to begin to build upwards while continuing our efforts to secure an international agreement in fixing parity at the lowest level to which other nations would subscribe.

U.S. PROGRAMME.

Having referred to the programmes for increased air force in the United States, Japan and Russia, Lord Londonderry said they must hope it would be possible to fix a first line strength for the principal air powers which would neither be a threat to the peace of world nor impose an intolerable financial burden.

Britain and the Empire as a whole must be made safe in the air, but a race in air armaments should be avoided at all costs. Appropriate steps to ensure this policy were at present engaging the attention of the Government.

THE ELECTIONS IN SPAIN

FEW COMPLAINTS OF IRREGULARITIES

Madrid, Nov. 28. Leaving the National Palace after a conference with President Alcala Zamora, Senor Martinez Barrios, the Spanish Prime Minister, said to press representatives: "Seeing that there were few protests received so far regarding the regularity of the election, the new Cortes will be constituted before long. As soon as it opens, the Parliament will have to take up the question of the budget and examine several extraordinary credit items which were not approved by the permanent finance committee of the Cortes. In spite of what is said in this connection," added Senor Barrios, "I cannot hand in the resignation of the Cabinet as long as the Cortes is not constituted."

During the dinner dance in the Grill Room of the Hongkong Hotel to-night, Ecuador and Rosta, the popular Spanish dancers, will entertain.

The m.v. Siamet Prince, from New York, sailed from Shanghai on the 29th instant and is expected here tomorrow.

for very long time been kept fully informed of the position in Lancashire. They had been giving attention to the best and most practicable way of approaching the problems which increased Japanese competition involved.

When last before the House, the Government expressed itself in favour of an attempt being made by the industrialists themselves in the first place, and they had been justified by what had happened in India in the last four months. The fall of imports of English cloths in India was one of the greatest problems that had to be faced. The Indian boycott was now over, and Lancashire was about to regain some portion of the market lost during the boycott. Fortunately, the industrialists who went to India were able to reach an agreement with the cotton producers.

There were other parts of the world where it was not so easy to deal with the situation, and in India itself they had not been able to dispose of the whole problem. Japan was a very large importer into India, and her imports had been going up year by year. The Indian Government was very much alive to the situation, and was in closest consultation with the representatives of Japan. If there was any delay in these negotiations, it had not been the fault of the British Government.

TRADE MARK INFRINGEMENT.

Referring to unfair competition based on infringement of designs and trade marks, Mr. Runciman said this was matter which gave cause for a good deal of trouble, not in this country so much as elsewhere, for here the machinery for dealing with infringement of trade marks and copyright of designs was fairly complete. In some portions of the British Empire, however, goods had been imported from Japan bearing British names and British trade marks.

That was a form of dishonesty which any Government, whether in the East or West, ought to do its best to suppress. If it was necessary to take steps, and if the Government could be given material on which to take steps, they were prepared to take them, but he hoped that by making representations the necessary impression would be made on the minds of those in control of Japanese commercial affairs.

TREATY ABROGATION.

He did not see that there would be any advantage to Lancashire industry if they began, as was suggested in some quarters, by abrogating the Anglo-Japanese Treaty, which he reminded the house, also affected some thirty other countries in the British Empire. He preferred first to exhaust all other means, but if they found it necessary to denounce the Treaty, then he would view the whole subject from a different point of view and with quite a different intent.—British Wireless.

DAY BY DAY NEWS IN BRIEF

REAL EXCELLENCE, INDEED, IS MOST RECOGNIZED WHEN MOST OPENLY LOOKED INTO.—Plutarck.

Colonel M. H. Logan arrived here by the Empress of Asia from Shanghai to-day.

"The Rebel," now showing at the King's Theatre, is a fine dramatic film, noteworthy alike for the magnificence of the photography and the powerful acting of the principals, Vilma Banky and Luis Trenker. With a historical background, it is set in the Tyrol, and it holds interest to the last flicker. Vilma Banky makes an excellent come-back in this, her first appearance in the talkies, while Luis Trenker is quite impressive.

COW-HERD'S STRANGE VISION

Goddess of Death in Garb of Old Woman

Hyderabad, Deccan.

Much stir has been aroused among the Telugu speaking community. (Hindus), at the strange apparition which, according to a youthful cow-herd, appeared to him one evening at sunset, while he was tending cattle.

The youth, who was visibly stirred by his experience, stated that he was tending cattle on the bank of the Hussain Sagar Tank in the city when, just at sunset, as he was preparing to drive his herd home, an old woman suddenly confronted him. In her left hand she held a human skull while in her right hand was a sheaf of ripe corn, emblems of death and prosperity respectively.

Something in her uncanny appearance frightened the youth whose fear turned to terror when the woman beckoned to him peremptorily. He obeyed, however, and the Goddess of Death, for such was the apparition believed to be, commanded him to take her across the lake to the opposite bank. The boy replied that he had no boat by means of which he might fulfil her behest, but at this, it is stated, she turned round to face the waters and waving her hand, caused them to part, leaving a dry pathway where a minute previously there was water.

Along this, the boy declared, he led the apparition. Half-way she asked him whether he wanted locks (implying death) or sweets (implying happiness). The boy readily expressed preference for sweets, whereupon she placed the sheaf of corn she carried in the boy's hands and informed him that if he and others of his community (Telugus) shared his preference they should celebrate the Telugu New Year, which usually begins in December, on the 10th of the current month. She then disappeared.

The boy returned home thereafter and narrated to others what had befallen him. They implicitly regard the vision as the expression of a divine wish and are acting accordingly. Votive offerings are being offered to the goddess and the New Year is also being celebrated.—Reuter.

AMERICAN RECOVERY PROPOSALS

Farm Administration's Cotton Offer

Washington, Nov. 29.

The Farm Administration has formulated a cotton acreage reduction contract for 1934/35 which provides that growers agreeing to reduce their acreage will be paid a rental on the land taken from production.

The rental value will be placed at from three to eighteen dollars per acre, according to the productivity of the land.

Producers will also be paid not less than one cent a pound on a domestic allotment which will be forty per cent of the average yield of the land during the period 1928-32.—Reuter.

FIERCE GUNFIGHT

ROBBER KILLED BY POLICE FIRE

Shanghai, Nov. 29.

A thrilling running gunfight was staged here this evening at the busy intersection of Connaught and Hart Roads when detectives fought with three armed robbers in a piece goods shop.

The detectives, it is believed, surprised the gang, and challenged them while they were attempting to hold up the store. The robbers opened fire.

Although police believed that their fire wounded the dead man's two companions, these escaped.

A Chinese woman was wounded during the encounter but there were no police casualties.—Our Own Correspondent.

LUCKY WIN FOR H.M.S. KENT

RETAIN DIV. I LEADERSHIP

A lucky win at the expense of H.M.S. Berwick consolidated H.M.S. Kent's position at the head of the first division of the China Fleet Football League, when the teams met at Happy Valley yesterday.

The Kent, who have now won three out of seven matches, yet remain undefeated, captured the points by the odd goal in five, after the Berwick had twice held the lead.

The losers enjoyed the greater share of the play, but could not force home their advantages.

Jones and Hamblin on the wings put in some fine work for the Berwick, but even with Langmead in the middle, goals went begging.

FINE GOALKEEPING.

Hancock kept a magnificent goal for the Kent, and the opportunism of Green, together with the thrustful work of Hudspeth on the left wing, made the Kent attack very dangerous when on the move.

Morgan gave the Berwick the lead early on, but Green had a shot deflected into the net by Jenkins level things up. However the Berwick again went ahead when Jones made use of a chance, but a half time lead was denied them, Hill scoring for the Kent.

The second half saw some fairly even exchanges, with the Berwick holding the advantage territorially.

The issue was put beyond doubt when Green snapped up a chance, and placed the Kent ahead for the first time. Teams:

Berwick:—Funnell, Millan and Jenkins; Kent, Thomas and Cassell; Jones, Morgan, Langmead, Ryan and Hamblin.

Kent:—Hancock, Lockett and McLea; Schofield, Redman and Heap; Green, Bowles, Stevenson, Hills and Hudspeth.

MEDWAY'S SMART RECOVERY

Hold Berwick To A Draw

After being led two-nil at half time, the Medway recovered in great style against H.M.S. Berwick in a third division match of the China Fleet Football League yesterday at Happy Valley, and finally succeeded in forcing a draw of two goals each.

The Berwick thoroughly merited their half time advantage. They were vastly superior in the opening stages, and only the excellent goalkeeping of Leech kept the score down.

Braddon broke through quite early in the game to open the Berwick's account, and after some that exchanges, Coombes, with a fine solo effort, added a second.

CLEVER WINGERS.

During this period the Medway were handicapped by playing one short, but later the team was completed, and they immediately began to get into their stride.

Clever work by their wingers, Tarr and Branton led to continual raids on the Berwick goal in the second half, and it was from Branton's pass that Hodgkinson reduced the deficit. Later Branton broke through himself to score the equaliser, completing an afternoon of splendid achievement. Teams:

Berwick:—XI:—Davis, Kenn, Laker, Olliffe, Braddon, Williams, Worthington, Coombes, Kennedy, Broese, Parsons.

Medway:—XI:—Leach, Magill, Reeves, Barrett, Robertson, Bright, Tarr, Donaldson, Elgley, Hodgkinson, Branton.

NAVY LOSE THEIR RIGHT BACK.

BUCHAANAN SAILS FOR ENGLAND.

A real blow to the hopes of the Navy bringing off a coup against South China in the first division of the football league on Saturday has been given in the departure from the Colony this week of A. Buchanan, the Navy's right back.

He left for Europe on the s.s. Achilles yesterday, and is retiring from the Navy.

Mrs Moody Not To Play For Two Years

STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

San Francisco, Nov. 24.
Helen—Wills—Moody, outstanding woman tennis player, will not compete again for at least two years because of the displaced vertebrae that caused her to default in dramatic fashion to Helen Jacobs in the national finals in September at Forest Hills, L.I.

"Little Poker Face" said to-day she probably would not be permitted to swing a racket until 1935.

The announcement was not wholly unexpected as her father, Dr. C. A. Wills, said on Oct. 2 that she might have to relinquish her titles, including the Wimbledon crown she has won six successive times. He said only time would tell whether she would ever be able to take part again in tournament tennis.

Miss Wills herself however said two weeks later she hoped to return to competition next year. She was then out of the hospital and walked with difficulty with the aid of a cane.

When she defaulted to her fellow Californian, Miss Jacobs, in the national women's finals she was wearing a brace on her back. She said she believed she injured herself while lifting a stone on a camping trip last summer.

Miss Wills failed to defend her national title in 1932, when Miss Jacobs first won, and then defaulted this year.

THRILLING MATCH PROMISED

SAILORS MAY EMULATE CLUB'S EXAMPLE

S. CHINA HALFBACKS MUST IMPROVE IF DEFEAT IS TO BE AVOIDED

TAY QUA TONG TO FILL LEFT WING POSITION

(By "Veritas").

"I CONSIDER the Navy the finest team in the League."

THUS the considered judgment of a leading local authority on football, and although I have no wish to assist in the development of an inferiority complex on the part of South China, I feel that this is what they will be up against on Saturday.

The Railway Ground promises to stage one of THE matches of the year, for with the meeting of the Navy and South China, we shall not only have brought together some of the most skilful footballers in the Colony, but there will be other influences at work to make the exchanges keener and more exciting.

The Navy will take the field brimful of confidence. They have struck a winning vein, are well in running for the leadership, and can back these factors with a team of talented players.

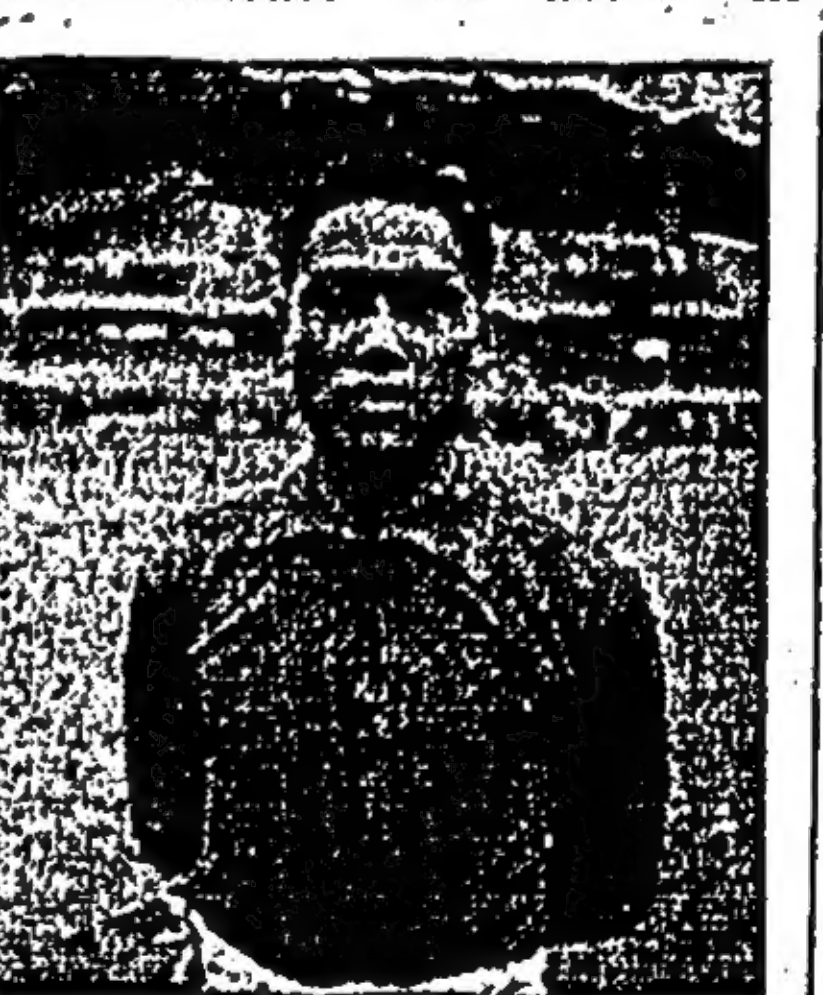

South China, on the other hand, have first to efface from memory their last two performances in order to start on level footing, and must then play a better type of football if they are to win.

So far as I know the Navy line-up will be the same as that which beat Kowloon with the exception of Buchanan, who has left for home. In which case Lau Mau and Li Tin-sang are going to be up against as big a problem as presented last week by the Club attack.

THE BIG QUESTION.

Can the Chinese defence avert being swept off their feet in the first half? This will be one of the main questions. Last week they gave a negative answer, and it cost them two points.

Kowloon discovered to their cost how thorough can be those eager Navy attackers. The fleet footed Hudspeth, aided by the clever schemings of Smith, and the forceful leadership of Langmead, require a defence well above the

But as my colleague "Wanderer" pointed out on Monday, it is the splendid balance of the Navy team which counts so much. This has been evidenced in the whole of their games this season.

Practically speaking there is not a weakness in the combination. An especially reliable half back line helps to tighten up a defence which has once or twice given signs of breaking down.

South China will assuredly have to be at their best to aid the scalp of the Navy to their season's hunting.

THE RETURN OF TAY.

The Chinese have one consolation. Last week's left wing deficiency will be remedied by the return of Tay Qua-tong. Tay comes out of his suspension to-morrow, and is certain to be included in Saturday's team in place of Tong Kwan.

So that Purkins can look forward to a fairly busy afternoon.

In his only other previous appearance this season—against the Borderers at Sookunpoo—Tay revealed a turn of speed truly astonishing. And if he can get Tam Kong-pak to put through some of his favourite forward passes, the Navy may experience a whole heap of trouble from this wing.

I think we can expect a general brightening up of the Chinese attack as a result of Tay's inclusion.

What South China seem to have lost sight of is the fact that in Yeung Shui-yic they possess about the finest outside right in the Colony.

When I have claimed this in conversation it has been hurled back that he lacks experience and that he has not yet fully developed. Perhaps he may and confessedly he has not. But there is no gain-saying that Yeung has this season "produced the goods".

BRIGHT FUTURE.

I see an extraordinarily bright future for this young player. There is nothing stereotyped about his play. He's got tricks and he knows how to use them. His ball control could give points to many a more experienced player, and he can centre with either foot.

But if South China are to obtain full value from this clever youngster, Leung Wing-chi and Leung In-chun have got to show a little more consideration in their passes.

It has been the collapse of the half back line which has caused the deterioration of the Caroline Hill team these past two weeks.

Leung Wing-chi seems to have forgotten how to hand out those long sweeping ground passes of his which rarely failed to catch a defence napping, and there has been a general slovenliness about the whole work of the intermediate trio.

The necessary return to form in this department may possibly mean all the difference between two points and defeat.

But regarding it by and large, I hesitate to pronounce any definite attitude to the probable outcome of Saturday's match. Anything might happen, although I think the Navy will at least start the game with the balance slightly in their favour.

CLUB PLAYERS RETURN

ROBERTSON AND SKINNER

Whether the Club's achievement a week ago was just a flash of inspiration, or whether it is to lay the foundation of a successful future will probably be determined when they meet St. Joseph's on Saturday.

The Club will be strengthened by the return of Robertson at right half and Skinner at centre-half.

Fogwell is still an absentee, but such an excellent deputy has been found in Lawson, that the "Blue and Whites" aren't worrying any.

Albert Howe, the Club centre-forward, is a doubtful starter. He told me this morning that his injury is slowly yielding to treatment, but he cannot yet say whether he will be fit for Saturday.

If he cannot turn out I should not be surprised to find either Bell or George Duncan included.

Duncan has been leading the Club second eleven with distinction this year, and Bell is consistently the best of the reserves' forward line.

The return of Robertson and Skinner will materially help the Club.

LAST WEEK'S STANDARD. NECESSARY.

If they can maintain last Saturday's standard, I favour the Club to beat St. Joseph's, because they always perform well at Caroline Hill. Though its rough surface makes it one of the most difficult playing pitches in the Colony, the Club have always managed to overcome the disadvantages.

Of course they will have no easier job in beating St. Joseph's than of South China. But the team is capable of big things. Leonard has to be severely watched, but I shouldn't be surprised to see much of the sting taken out of Saints' attack by the subjugation of Gosau on the right wing.

Hynes and Robertson are capable of keeping a strict enough watch on Fernandez and Rocha.

Lau Mau (S. China).

If two teams have been playing league football for a couple of months, neither of them have won a single point, and they meet, what is likely to happen? No prizes are offered for the solution of this conundrum: and anyhow, if you

KID CHOCOLATE FLOORED IN 2ND ROUND

THE WHIRLWIND CANZONERI

New York, Nov. 24.

With a whirlwind attack, Tony Canzoneri, the recently-dethroned lightweight champion, flattened Kid Chocolate to the canvas in the second round here to-night before a howling crowd which never expected to see the Cuban bon bon take the count.

Chocolate, recognized in New York and other states as the world featherweight and junior lightweight champion, went down before a right to the head after two minutes and a half of the second stanza.

It was the only knockdown of the scrap which brought together two of the outstanding fighters in a non-little event.

Canzoneri started out fast seeking a quick kyo of the Cuban and rocked him repeatedly in the first round. Chocolate then staided temporarily but under a vicious attack became dazed and kept going only by the fighting instinct that has kept him at the top of the feather division for the last several years.

Canzoneri had a three-pound weight advantage, scaling 133 pounds to 130 for the little Cuban Negro.

Canzoneri last summer dropped his lightweight title to Barney Ross of Chicago and failed to regain it in a return match here in September, but is still rated at the top in his weight class. It was the first knockout of Chocolate. He was counted out as he lay face down on the canvas.

A King's Park Conundrum: Can Artillery Win?

care to slip along to King's Park on Saturday you can see it worked out for yourself.

The answer will be supplied through the meeting of the Recreio and Royal Artillery. So far both have made abortive searches for points. The Artillery have made half a dozen attempts to improve the position, two of which went very close to fruition, whilst the Recreio have eight times left the field unapposed.

I am afraid Saturday will be the ninth occasion!

Even without Harris, and with the experiment of Sergt. Woods at centre-forward, the Gunners should be good enough to break up their game. They do not move the ball quickly enough to indulge in short-passing. The wings should be kept constantly on the move. But that's up to Pardoe and his colleagues.

The Recreio, who, as a team of enthusiastic triers, are second to none in the Colony will not take the field utterly despairing. They have played good games this season without any attendant luck. This supplied, and a little more confidence in themselves will make a lot of difference. So don't be surprised if they spring a surprise!

POSITION NOW SERIOUS

LINCOLNS & THE LEADERSHIP

Last week I asked, though not with very much conviction "Will the Lincolns suffer a decline?" Since their debacle against St. Joseph's the question must be repeated with more seriousness.

Like South China they have experienced two rather unhappy matches in succession. Whether the Lincolns will show this completely to upset their equilibrium is, perhaps, rather premature to suggest. But if they are to remain in the race for league leadership, they cannot afford to drop many more points, and I imagine Sunday's game with the Police will decisively settle the issue one way or the other.

On form I cannot see how the Lincolns can lose, and despite their disappointing displays of the last fortnight, my faith in them remains.

10 MINUTES FOOTBALL. LESSON FROM OVERSEAS WHEN CLEVERNESS IS FUTILE

(By "Saracen")

Watching the Peru-Chile team, who recently played a series of matches in this country, one realized that cleverness was of little avail unless it had a direct purpose. All the swerving, side-stepping and intricate short passing has only a spectacular value unless it leads to the ball being put in the net.

But the methods of the tourists emphasized another point. Like most Continental teams they are largely passive in their resistance in defence. They don't go in to get the ball; they do not even challenge for it unless they have a good chance to secure it.

The result of these tactics is that a man finds himself in possession in ample space and with time to do as he likes. Almost unopposed he falls to the temptation to dribble the ball forward with the opposition giving way, or retreating before him.

But finally he is compelled to pass and then he finds that all his colleagues who have moved forward in "advance" are covered. It is as if the defence have thrown up an unscalable wall in the penalty area and the attack breaks down before it.

One lesson is to be learnt from this type of defence, which may be condemned as unsound but which is usually very effective when practised against British teams, who are unfamiliar with it. If advantage is to be taken of withdrawals of the defence in the middle of the field the situation must be exploited quickly.

That is to say instead of the man with the ball dribbling he ought to push it through to a colleague before he is covered. As we say, he should make the ball do the work. The same principle should be applied to the game under all conditions. Indeed its importance cannot be over emphasized if the forwards are to have a chance to break through and it applies specially to the half backs. A half back is fortified in holding the ball long enough to "draw" an opponent, and possibly to attempt to beat him, but having done this he should not keep it a second longer.

A fast service of the ball in these circumstances is imperative otherwise the defenders will be given the opportunity to take up position to check the attack. It should also be realized that the pass should not be placed direct to the player. The ball ought to be kicked into an open space where a man may collect it before being challenged.

LOCAL AMERICAN FOOTBALL

FIRST LEAGUE MATCH

ON SUNDAY

The American Football League between Hongkong and Canton clubs opens this week, when the South China Athletic Club visit Lin Nam University on Sunday.

The line-up of the Athletic has been announced as follows:

Clarence Chong	R. E.
Harry Chau	R. T.
Clyde Chung	R. G.
Clarence Ching	C.
Geo. Chow	L. G.
Edward Lee	L. T.
Matty Chang	L. E.
Henry Young	F. B.
Eddy Chang	Q. B.
Jimmy Ching	H. B.
Henry Ching	H. B.

The substitutes are Jimmy Pan, Tait Pong, Jerry Young and S. K. Chan.

UNFORTUNATE LOSS.

The local club has been unfortunate in losing the services of Jimmy Leong, their full-back and triple threat man, and Jerry Wong, at centre. Leong was the most experienced player in the side and around him the team was built up. Both men are leaving for Honolulu on the morning of the match and their absence will mean a great deal. Clarence Ching has been brought in in the place of Jerry Wong and Henry Young at full-back.

Bill Eut, the S.C.A.C. coach, is very pleased with the spirit and showing of the local lads in their practice to-date, especially in a game with a U.S. Navy team last Sunday when they came through with a win of 12 points to 7.

The Chinese players were much lighter than their opponents but better team work was the deciding factor. At the end of the first quarter no score was registered but soon after the commencement of the second Jimmy Leong scored the first touchdown of the game over a tackle from the 4 yd. line.

In the same quarter, O'Brien the Navy full-back, gave his side the lead with a touch-down which he himself converted. The S.C.A.C. obtained their winning touch-down through Eddy Chow the star miniature quarterback (he

CINEMA SCREENINGS

NOTES SUPPLIED BY THE THEATRES

The wild beasts of the zoo—marling behind the bars of their cages in the Carnivora House—are the witnesses of the screen's newest and most ingenious death method in Paramount's "Murders in the Zoo," which is opening to-morrow at the Queen's and is featuring Charlie Ruggles, Lionel Atwill, Kathleen Burke, Randolph Scott, John Lodge and Gail Patrick. A now infamous killer slithers across the screen in this terrifying drama of death upon death. It is the fatal Green Mamba, scourge of the jungle, feared alike by men and beasts on the Dark Continent from whence it comes to give screen audiences the merry old jitters. But the Green Mamba is merely the living symbol of the machinations within the distorted mind of Eric Gorman, played by Lionel Atwill. He portrays one of those "bring 'em back alive" animal collectors who, more often than not, sends his human opponents home dead. It is his insane jealousy of all who looks upon his beautiful wife (Kathleen Burke) that is responsible for his evil purposes and still more evil actions. When, in the opening sequence, he sews a man's lips together because this friend dared, in a drunken moment, to kiss Atwill's wife, the audience wonders what more imposing punishment may be devised for the man's later victim. Charlie Ruggles furnishes the comedy relief most effectively. He thoroughly enjoys the role of Peter Yates, dithering press agent to whom animals are anathema, yet who, nevertheless, grabs the berth of exploitation man for the zoo as his last chance. The picture's shock full of action from the opening murder to the closing roars of the loaded lions, tigers, panthers and leopards who unwittingly provide the only possible satisfactory conclusion to "Murders in the Zoo."

"The Conquerors"

Hollywood has kept faith with a public that has nursed the motion picture since its nickelodeon birth. From the celluloid mills has come a film production that dares to honestly portray an undiscussed but romantic era in the history of the United States. It is the RKO's Radio Picture, "The Conquerors," which is now playing at the Central Theatre with Richard Dix and Ann Harding in the co-starring roles. Here at last, is something on the screen that every man, woman and child should see. It is powerful and stirring flesh-and-blood document of what America has faced and survived during three major depressions since 1873. Historical highlights, from the time Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone up to the time Lindbergh spanned the Atlantic, go hurtling by on the screen in the midst of an intensely absorbing romantic progress participated in by Richard Dix and Miss Harding.

"Pilgrimage"

Ever since Heather Angel became a star of the stage and screen in London her admirers have thought that her name was one adopted for professional purposes but her mother, Mrs. Andrea Angel, is authority for the statement that the young lady has had no name other than Heather Angel since that February 9 when she was born in Oxford, England. Miss Angel's father was Andrea Angel, a chemist and professor at Oxford, who lost his life in the World War. Her first American screen appearance is in "Pilgrimage," the Fox production with Henrietta Croaman, Norman Foster and Marian Nixon. The film, directed by John Ford, comes on Sunday next to the King's Theatre.

"The Rebel"

Those who have seen "The Rebel," the Universal Special now playing at the King's Theatre, remember the excellence of the photography, the unusual camera angles, the sheer beauty of the Tyrolean panorama rendered doubly exquisite by the camera's magic. Great pains were taken by Paul Kohner, associate producer for Universal, to secure the very best available talent in Europe to photograph the picture. Sepp Algeier, one of the most famous camera men, who was responsible for the beautiful camera work on "The Doomed Battalion," was engaged to photograph most of the exteriors of "The Rebel." In addition to Algeier, the camera staff included Albert Rohrer, and Willi Golberger, both experts in their line. Luis Trenker, who is starred in "The Rebel," and who also is co-author and director of the production with Edwin H. Knopf, has Vilma Banky and Victor Varconi in the principal supporting roles.

I'm Very Sorry.....!

You have been looking forward to the party for days and then a heavy cold compels you to cry off..... sneezing, coughing, snuffling and wretched you have not dared to go.

A few Rospiroids taken at the first indication of the approaching trouble would have made a difference. These pleasant-tasting lozenges, when held in the mouth and allowed to dissolve slowly, emit antiseptic vapours which, circulating through the respiratory organs, dispel the germs of colds before they have got a grip. Many a cold can be arrested in its early stages by the use of Rospiroids. After a cold has developed, Rospiroids will still be found beneficial, as they help to break up the phlegm congested in the throat and lungs, relieve sore throat, and clear the nasal passages. Keep a bottle in the house for family use. Obtainable at all chemists, or at $1.20 per bottle, post free, from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., 451, Klange Road, Shanghai.

WORLD WAITING FOR GERMANY

LITVINOFF'S MISSION IN ITALY

Rome, Nov. 29.
No progress in disarmament is possible until Germany states her claims according to authoritative sources here, expressing the Italian view on the present impasse in Europe.

There is no foundation for the report that Premier Mussolini is contemplating the formation of a Seven Power Group, including Japan, to assure world peace. Such a suggestion was given prominence in many foreign newspapers recently.

It is understood, however, that Signor Mussolini desires a revision of the League of Nations, with a view to obtaining membership of the United States and Russia and the return of Japan to the fold. No proposals have been made as yet, as the time is considered inopportune in consequence of the present international tension.

If such a scheme as Signor Mussolini contemplates were effected, seven great Powers would join the League Council, logically, it is believed. This argument has evidently given rise to the report of a Seven Power Pact, it is suggested here.

Meanwhile, it is understood that Sir Eric Drummond's conversations with Signor Mussolini did not mention any such scheme. The talks were confined to Germany and France reaching some agreement on the Disarmament plan and procedure for proposed bi-lateral conversations advocated by Sir John Simon.

All parties here are eagerly awaiting the return of Herr Hassell, the German Ambassador, as he is supposed to be bringing Chancellor Hitler's latest proposals.

Litvinoff's Visit.
It is understood the primary reason for M. Litvinoff's visit to Rome is the formal ratification of a Russo-Italian pact of friendship and non-aggression, which was initiated earlier in the year.

Questions likely to be discussed during his sojourn here, however, include Disarmament. A general upsurge of fears on the Russian frontiers, would be a powerful stimulant to general disarmament, it is felt.

It is likely that an Eastern Mediterranean bloc, consisting of Italy, Russia, Turkey, with a benevolent Greece, will be discussed as well. This idea has recently progressed considerably.

Italy is anxious to increase her imports of Russian raw material in exchange for machinery, textiles and other manufactures, and this will probably be another ground for conversation.

Signor Mussolini is desirous of drawing Russia out of her isolation and bringing her back into the comity of European nations. Here, then, is another avenue of contact which may be explored.—Reuter.

The buildings during the existence of the late company were occupied as garages, the upper floors being let out as tenements.

MISSOURI MOB TAKES MAN
FROM GAOL

St. Joseph, Miss., Nov. 29.

A furious mob of 7,000 persons battered down the door of the gaol here to-day and lynched a negro youth, who had been charged with ill-treating a white girl.

This is the second time within a week that an American mob has taken the law into its own hands, and hanged a prisoner before he was convicted. The previous case was that of the alleged kidnappers held in prison at San Jose, Cal.

The Missouri mob acted swiftly and before troops of the National Guard, called out by the sheriff of St. Joseph, could muster to intervene. Army tanks were also rushed to the gaol in an attempt to disperse the crowd. They were too late.

The negro was severely beaten with clubs before he was lynched in the prison courtyard.—Reuter.

NEW CHINA SHIPS.

QUESTION OF USE OF BOXER FUNDS

London, Nov. 29.

Mr. William Nunn, M.P., in the House of Commons to-day, drew the attention of the Government to the fact that the Chinese Government was inviting tenders for four new ships for the Chinese coastal trade and suggested that the proceeds of the Boxer Indemnity Fund should not be used to compete with English shipping.

Sir John Simon replied that the development of the Chinese coastal shipping necessarily entailed competition with British shipping, but added: "I am satisfied there is ground for effective representations. I understand the orders will be placed in Britain."—Reuter.

ARISTOCRATIC FILM STARS

FORMS ITS OWN COMPANY

Paris.
Whereas the French aristocracy led by Queen Marie Antoinette went in for amateur theatricals in the great days of the eighteenth century, to-day the younger aristocracy has formed its own film company.

Their first two films, already produced, assemble so many scenes of the ancient families of France that the cast would occupy fifty pages of the Gotha Almanac.

The young Baron Henri de Thiery has gathered round him such historic names as the Princess Gabrielle de Bourbon-Celle, the Duke and Duchess d'Ayen, the Marquis de Triquerville, the Duke de Noailles and the Marquis de Colomb de Puyblanc, while the scenes of the two films were laid in the old and beautiful Chateau de Maintenon, which was given by Louis XIV to Madame de Maintenon.

The camera-men, light and technical experts, scene shifters, etc., were all bearers of distinguished names.

The first film called "His Crime" is a detective comedy-drama, which begins with a murder at a chateau shooting party and ends with wedding bells. It is in the final wedding scenes that almost the entire younger generation of the French aristocracy takes part, so that in years to come the film will be an interesting record of the present era.

So far "His Crime" has only been shown in private by the Duchess de Noailles in aid of charities, but a move is on foot to give it public presentation.—Reuter.

BRANGWYN PANELS FOR WALES

REJECTED BY THE HOUSE OF LORDS

The famous panels designed by Frank Brangwyn, R.A., for the House of Lords, and rejected, are going to Swansea.

Swansea's town clerk was informed by Lord Iveagh and his co-trustees that they would be pleased for the panels to decorate the Assembly Hall of the new civic centre.

Cardiff corporation, to which Mr. Brangwyn had already presented several paintings from the first series, also applied for them.
So did Birmingham, while various efforts were made in London to provide a fitting home for these magnificent works by Britain's greatest decorative artist.

Seven Years' Work

Ten of the panels are 12ft.
square and six are 20ft. by 13ft., and they called for seven years' hard work.

The late Lord Iveagh commissioned them as the House of Lords War Memorial, but the peers' committee thought them much too luxuriant and excitedly alive for a sombre setting.
So they rejected them after seeing only a few.

These panels cost £20,000, and America was prepared to pay double that sum for them.

The decorative scheme which will form the background was submitted to Mr. Brangwyn, while the Iveagh trustees made their decision on the architect's scheme, which showed a whole wall with some of the paintings arranged upon it.

Belgrade.
Hadzija Ahmed Zelitch, who has just celebrated his 116th birthday claims to have outlived nine sovereigns, five wives and five sets of his own teeth. He avers that he latter have grown again and again.

He believes himself to be Bosnia's oldest inhabitant. Every day he takes a five-mile constitutional.

Six of his sons are still alive but he does not know how many children he has had altogether.
For 50 years now he has enjoyed a pension as a former town guard of his birth-place.

He has a 90-year-old wife. She looks much older than Ahmed.
"When she dies," he says, "I shall marry a young and pretty girl."

Otherwise Manda Hrovjevitch, who is one year younger than himself might be a fit mate.

She only gave up work in the fields a short time ago and can still walk a dozen miles a day without undue fatigue.

All Manda's descendants, except a great-grandson, were killed during the war.

She has been living with this survivor, but has had a difference with his wife. So now Manda is tramping back to her native village of Slunj, whose municipality will support her.

She has not got the railway fare.

SCHNEIDER PILOT WANTS JOB

ONE-TIME SPEED RECORD HOLDER

STARTLING ADVERTISEMENT

London, Nov. 30.
"Schneider Trophy winner. Once holder of the world's speed record seeks employment in any capacity."
This rather startling appeal for a job has caused excitement in Fleet Street, the "sluiths" being sent out in efforts to discover the identity of the advertiser.
It was revealed this morning.
The advertiser is Captain H. C. Blard, who led the British Schneider Trophy team to victory over the Italians at Naples in 1922, in a machine which would look rather extraordinary to-day alongside a modern Schneider Trophy plane.
He then established a world speed record for a seaplane of 146.7 miles an hour. The latest record is over 420 miles an hour.
Captain Blard revealed to an interviewer that he had been through a long period of ill-health but had now completely recovered.—Reuter.

ALMOST CERTAIN TO COME

MR. BALDWIN ANNOUNCES FIRST STEP

UNITED DEFENCE

London, Nov. 30.
Important changes in the administration of Britain's defence services seem to be foreshadowed in a speech by Mr. Stanley Baldwin, during last night's debate on the inadequacy of British air strength.

The view is strongly held in certain expert quarters that all the fighting services should be combined under one department, a Ministry of Defence, a project already adopted in Italy, and the Conservative leader indicated that at least a step in this direction was being made.

Mr. Baldwin declared that when the Estimates for the fighting services are to be presented in a few months' time, they will be examined on the basis of the united defence of the country, namely, the Army, Navy and Air Force, in combination.

They would see, said Mr. Baldwin, what money they had to spend and they would know what the disarmament position was in Europe and act accordingly.

The position of the three services will be carefully examined for defence as a whole.
The statement is interpreted as inferring that if a disarmament

BRITISH FAR EAST AIR STRENGTH

Increase Suggestion Turned Down

London, Nov. 29.
Suggestions for increasing Britain's air forces in the Far East and raising the status of the Air Force Command were made in the House of Commons to-day, by Captain Balfour, Isle of Thanet.
Sir Philip Sassoon said the Government did not intend such a step at the present time.—Reuter.

convention has not been signed, special attention may be devoted to the strengthening of Britain's air defences, even at the cost of the older services.

LIPS SEALED.

Dealing with the disarmament outlook, the Government spokesman, said that his lips were sealed on many highly important issues.

One of the difficulties confronting anyone speaking of disarmament, he added, was that he could not reveal all he knew.

He could not say, for instance, which people were raising the difficulties, otherwise it would be perfectly impossible to advance one inch.—Reuter.

THE GERMAN VIEW.

Contrary to foreign press comments no special significance is attached in Berlin to the interview which took place a few days ago between Herr Hitler and the French Ambassador, M. Francois-Poncet.
It is pointed out in diplomatic circles that in view of the French Cabinet difficulties, it is unlikely that the meeting could be regarded as an initial step for the opening of direct negotiations between Paris and Berlin in the disarmament question. It is generally assumed that the Ambassador's visit to the German Chancellor constituted one of the routine calls customary in the ordinary course of the diplomatic year.

FRANCE SHY OF BRITAIN.

According to one report, M. Poincaré and Herr Hitler merely discussed the recent alleged revelations of German policy published in the Petit Parisien, the German Chancellor declaring that the publication of such statements only increased "mistrust" among nations.

According to the Quai d'Orsay, however, the Ambassador's talk was highly important, though described as of a general character.

Direct contact is welcomed in Paris as long as the road between Paris and Berlin leads to Geneva. The French appear to be getting shy of British intervention, because it means also Italian intervention, with the shadow of the Four-Power Pact.—Reuter.

AIR FUEL FROM COAL

ROYAL AIR FORCE EXPERIMENT

London, Nov. 29.
It was revealed in the House of Commons that a certain Royal Air Force Squadron was being supplied with only petrol that was produced from British coal.
Questioned regarding the experiment, Sir Philip Sassoon, the Under-Secretary for Air, told Captain Balfour that it had hitherto been generally satisfactory.—Reuter.

AN ALL-BRITISH AIR LINE

FROM BRITAIN TO CHINA

London, Nov. 29.
The China Committee of the Manchester Chamber of Commerce visited the Under-Secretary for Air, Sir Philip Sassoon to-day, to discuss proposals for an all-British air mail line between Britain and China.—Reuter.

The Chief Justice, Mr. J. R. Wood, after attending the St. Andrew's Ball to-night, will embark on the Empress of Russia for Shanghai, where he will sit in the Full Court of Appeal.

The m.v. Siamese Prince, from New York, sailed from Shanghai on the 29th instant and is expected here to-morrow.

ROOSEVELT GOLD POLICY

"COMMODITY DOLLAR" STILL THE GOAL

BLACK RUMOURS DENIED

New York, Nov. 29.
"I have not the slightest idea of resigning," declared Mr. Eugene Black, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, on his arrival at Warm Springs, Georgia, to-day.

Rumours have been circulating recently concerning Mr. Black, suggesting that he has been in sympathy with Professor Sprague. It has even been suggested, and warmly denied, that the Federal Reserve Board has been working in opposition to the Treasury on the bond market.

Mr. Black said he was in Warm Springs for the purpose of reporting to President Roosevelt on the Federal Reserve Board's activities. He had no intention of resigning.

PRESIDENT UNMOVED.

No official announcement followed the meeting between Mr. Black and President Roosevelt, but (says Reuter) Mr. Roosevelt was represented as unmoved and unconcerned about the criticism launched from all quarters against his gold policy.

It is understood that he explained to Mr. Black that his daily monetary moves will not be announced, but he warned that no conclusions should be drawn from this fact.

DOLLAR REVALUATION.

It is emphasised in quarters closest to the President that dollar revaluation in terms of the domestic price level still is the goal.

It is also stated that silver has been under study for some time, but that there have been no recent developments.

THE MIDDLE PATH.

New York, Nov. 25.
Forty-four of the leading scientific economists of the United States have announced the formation of the Economists' National Committee on Monetary Policy for the purpose of opposing inflation and seeking an early return to the gold standard.

Professor E. W. Kemmerer, recognised authority on Central and South American finances and former advisor to the Chinese Government, heads the new organisation.

MOLEY'S VIEW.

Los Angeles, Nov. 25.
The advice of former Governor Alfred E. Smith is entitled to respectful consideration but the best plan would be to have the country of men gold standard advocates and the extreme inflationists, Dr. Raymond C. Moley, former Secretary of State and member of President Roosevelt's "Brain Trust," says.
Dr. Moley was interviewed by the press when he passed through Los Angeles en route to Santa Barbara, California, to spend Thanksgiving with his family.
Touching only briefly upon new developments in the monetary tangle, Dr. Moley scoffed at the

FUKIEN RESPONSE TO ULTIMATUM

LIKELY TO MAKE FIRST MOVE IN THREATENED CAMPAIGN

Fochow, Nov. 30.
The movements of the 49th and 78th Divisions of the Nineteenth Route Army, from west and south Fukien for the Fukien-Cheking frontier suggest that the "Provisional Government" means to strike first against Nanking.

Commanders are expecting early fighting and military and political leaders are in constant conference in Fochow.

General Chang Yin has returned to Changchow from Fochow, while Commander Miao Wei-shau flew to Chuenchow yesterday.

The departure of these officers is connected with the troop movements.

General Tsi Ting-kai will broadcast this evening on the policies of the Provisional government.

No political development of much significance has occurred. An official spokesman predicts an early attack on Cheking.

NOTES TO POWERS.

Nanking, Nov. 30.
The Foreign Ministry, under instructions from Marshal Chiang Kai-shek, is about to dispatch notes to foreign governments requesting that no material supplies be sent to the Fukien Province during the secessionists' revolt.
Nanking's naval blockade will be explained and the foreign gunboats are requested not to enter certain waters on the Fukien coast, which will be mined.

It is believed here that the Fukien secessionists have agreed to a Japanese consular demand at Amoy to prevent fighting at Amoy by withdrawing all Chinese troops from this Fukien port.

FUKIEN CUSTOMS.

Fochow, Nov. 30.
The "Foreign Office" of the rebel action of Wall Street, of attacking the Government's policies saying that this was no time for such controversy.

He added that the present gold programme was credited by observers as promoting an increased foreign trade.

"MARRY NOW" CAMPAIGN.

A "Marry Now" campaign to supplement the N.R.A. suggested by Mr. Mark Welsh, whose ordinary occupation is direction of the state fight against hog cholera.

His current bulletin, based on Signor Mussolini's bachelor tax, includes the following:
"Inasmuch as the running of homes is the biggest industry in the country," he says, "we should start a 'Marry Now' campaign to increase the consumption of marriage licences. Make it a patriotic duty to save the country by joining the N.R.A. Benedict Army as it was to join the A.E.F."

"Think of the homeland appeal and slogans—'Eat our crops and have 'em too,' 'Buy a Home, Promote Prosperity,' 'Marriage Makes Men,' 'A marriage a day keeps depression away,' 'Solomon, the wisest of men, had 500 wives—what does that mean to you!'"

IF JAPAN DOES NOT HEED WARNING

TEXTILE TRADE WAR

London, Nov. 30.

If Mr. Runciman's warning falls on deaf ears, the Government must be ready with active measures for defence against Japanese competition, says the Morning Post, commenting on the debate in the House of Commons last night.

"Neither the employers nor the workers of Lancashire have done their utmost to help themselves out of their common difficulties," the journal says, "but action is still necessary."

Mr. Runciman has given Japan an opportunity of gaining an accurate estimate of the British official attitude and if the warning is not heeded, the Government must take action, beginning with the throwing of a cordon of tariffs round the Colonial Empire.—Reuter.

(Yesterday's debate on Japanese competition, with Mr. Runciman's reply, will be found in Page Thirteen).

TOKYO OUTRAGES

CIVILIAN TRIAL CONCLUDED

HEAVY SENTENCES DEMANDED

Tokyo, Nov. 30.

After a trial lasting for over two months, the Public Prosecutor to-day demanded exemplary sentences on the twenty civilians implicated in last year's May 15 outrages. The trial opened on September 26 last.

The Prosecutor demanded a sentence of life imprisonment on the alleged ring-leaders in the civilian group, Kōsabe Tachibana and Kawasaki; fifteen years' imprisonment for Okawa, who is alleged to have been connected with the assassination of Baron Takuma Daini; ten years' imprisonment for Hideo Toyama, son of the veteran reactionary leader; ten years for Homma, and from seven to fifteen years for the remainder, including Dr. Shumei Okawa and Nishio Inouye, the fanatical priest of the Nichiren sect.

It is a notable fact that imprisonment with hard labour was demanded in every case for the civilian accused. None of the naval officers or military men were given hard labour.—Reuter.

The Vicomte de Sibour, who, accompanied by his wife and son, was to have resumed his flight this morning by leaving for Shanghai via Swatow and Amoy, has found it necessary to postpone his departure.

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

Should we do a lot of explaining when we tell a child to do something or not to do it? Should we go into details about reasons, why he should obey and why we command him?

No.
I don't give a snap of my fingers for the child who has to be harnessed and coaxed before he makes up his mind to do what he's told.
Give me the boy or girl who would jump into a tar barrel if his parents gave the order.

Thus committing myself I shall have to explain.

In the first place, the parent a
child obeys is the parent he trusts.
I don't mean the humoring parent,
either, the one who never gives an order that will interfere with his child's pleasure. I mean the parent whom the boy or girl recognizes as having sense and judgment and he respects. A spoiled child does not have this feeling.
He may obey, but this is because
do what he doesn't want to.

Necessity for Obedience

In the next place, you may be thinking, why do I say this when I have written many times about
the wisdom of talking to children
and explaining why such and such a thing must be done. Why do I about face now and cry out for unquestioning obedience?

It is not hard to reconcile the
two. The one is the foundation for the other. I think every human being has to have ingrained in his

character the necessity of absolute obedience to something. Every one of us is obeying one or a hundred laws every day. The sooner we learn that lesson the better.

Then and then only are we ready for and entitled to an explanation of new laws as they come along, or anything unusual
that taxes our convenience.

It isn't so much the fact that a good child will obey implicitly
that counts, as the state of mind
that acknowledges law as it is.

Now we come to the big objection to this "unquestioning obedience" matter; that such children
are cowed, lose their spirit and self-reliance and never make new tracks for themselves. I acknowledge this, too.

Gain Child's Confidence.

It is true that the child who can't call his soul his own often turns out to be a spineless creature; or a traitor; or, if he has
it in him, sometimes he becomes a rebellious outlaw altogether.

Just the same if a child is allowed to grow up obeying no law
but himself, he is going to his ruin
as surely as a wild colt in a bar-
wire entanglement.

Parents should inculcate in every child one fundamental idea, "We must be obeyed." But at the same time they must show the child
that they are reasonable, square,
and human—and gain his faith,
love and confidence. Also there are sure to be times when it is much the best policy to explain
"why" to a child, and to show him
how matters stand. I like this very much. Children are keen.
They have sense. They easily see
the justice of things.

But too few of our children have any real idea what the word
"must" means. And no mortal on earth will have read grit or backbone until he learns it.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

The Right Way to Use Cosmetics

By Alicia Hart

Don't let the use of one wrong
right ones.

Mostly beauty preparations have to be used in conjunction with some others. And one won't do any good unless you follow it up with another preparation designed to go with it.

For instance, pore cream will
do very little good unless you use an astringent of skin toning lotion, too.

Nor will muscle oils strengthen the muscles of your chin if they are applied without a patting
treatment.

You can get a ready-made patter or you can make one yourself
by fastening soft cotton pads over the end of a shoe tree. Smear a little muscle oil on your chin and then pat it in with the patten.

It is usually a good idea to use
one brand of cosmetics and skin
preparations. Mixing several brands on your face may not work
at all.

Cosmeticians have realized
more and more that no woman wants to buy large containers of
a product until they have tried it.
Consequently, you can get complete sets of lotions and creams put up in little-larger-than-sani-taries jars. These give you a chance to find out what you are using before investing in more expensive,
full-size jars.

THE UNKNOWN BLONDE

BY LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

(All Rights Reserved.)

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

On a stormy November evening DAVID BANNISTER meets a pretty blond girl and offers her a lift in the cab in which he is riding. Her handbag opens and he sees a revolver inside.

Next morning Bannister reads that TRACY KING, orchestra leader in a movie theatre, has been found dead in his apartment. Police are searching for an "unknown blonde" who visited King the night before. Bannister, remembering the girl to the taxi, is puzzled. He sees her again that morning. The girl tells him her name is JULIET FIANCE and that she knows nothing of the murder. She begs Bannister to help her and he agrees. He goes to see his old friend, JIM PAXTON, editor of the Tremont Post.

CHAPTER VI

Jim Paxton's face lighted as he saw the figure in the doorway. "Hello there!" he exclaimed. "Glad you came around." Paxton put aside the cigar he had been chewing and leaned back in his chair. "Lord!" he sighed. "What a morning!"

Bannister sauntered to a chair beside the editor's desk. The desk itself was piled high with a litter of newspapers, galley proofs, large manilla envelopes and a stack of letters that had not been opened. "How much did you lose last night?" Bannister demanded.

"Oh, it isn't that. I followed your example and went home early," Paxton assured him. "But I've been down here since six o'clock. That blasted murder last night hit us in a bad way. The Times had all the best of it, of course, coming out this morning. Did a good job, too."

The Times was Tremont's only morning newspaper but the same publishers issued the evening News-Press. Against such opposition the Post had prospered but it was a continuous fight.

"It hit us in a bad way," Paxton repeated. "Kennedy, the city editor, is laid up in a hospital and his assistant is a new one. Only been on the job two months. Besides that," he frowned, raising his two hands in a gesture of defenselessness, "we're short-handed. One man off on a late vacation and another quit without notice. There are a couple of youngsters filling in but they don't know what it's all about."

"What's new on the murder?" Bannister asked.

"Nothing—apparently. I guess they're still looking for the mysterious blonde. More promises that they'll have her at headquarters 'within 24 hours.' Say, it's a whale of a story, isn't it? You don't know what a sensation that crooning orchestra leader has been in this town! Girls and women all crazy about him. Sending him letters and cakes and all sorts of presents. Asking for autographed pictures. Why, our telephone operator's eyes are red and swollen and they say one of the girls in the business office has been crying half the morning—"

"Must have been popular," Bannister agreed shortly.

"Popular's no word for it! And then there's the society angle—his engagement to Donise Lang, the richest girl in Tremont. Why, it's the sort of story that doesn't break once in five years and," bitterly, "we don't even start on it before the Times has cleaned up!"

"I wouldn't say it was cleaned up," Bannister commented. "Not until they find out who killed him."

"Oh, no, of course I didn't mean that. But the Times had the whole story—all anyone's been able to get so far. If Kennedy were only here or I had two more reporters—"

Bannister had been sitting with his chair tipped back. He brought the two front legs of the chair to the floor now, straightened and said quietly, "You want more reporters, do you? Well, I'll take the job."

"You'll take it?"

Bannister nodded. "I'd like to take a fling at it," he said. "Remember what we were talking about last night—about the thrills and excitement we used to have? Well, I'm bored. I've been bored for months. Haven't a thing to do with myself or my time. Here a cracking good murder breaks and I'd like to get in on it. Maybe it's because I'm back in Tremont—"

"Why, Lord love you, Dave! You don't mean you want to be a reporter on the Post again, do you?"

"Why not?" Bannister was talking eagerly now. "I'd like to find out who killed Tracy King—and why. Oh, I don't suppose I'll be much help to you! Probably I'm stale; been out of harness too long. But I can do leg work. I'd like to be on the inside of a murder story once more and see the wheels go around. I used to have a pretty good standing with McNeal and I'll bet I still know half the force—"

"Go to it!" Paxton told him curtly. "There was never a better police reporter in Tremont than you were, Dave. Maybe you'll get some ideas you can use in a novel."

"Yes, and maybe I'll get my neck broken," Suddenly Dave Bannister grinned. "This is going to be fun! Going to be—"

"There's one thing," he stopped. "I don't want to cut in on any of your boys. I mean whoever is handling the story. Your man can write all the by-line stories. All I want to do is work with him. Whatever I get I'll turn over for him to write—"

Ten minutes later Paxton and Bannister were in the city room—the same large, square city room, scarcely changed, where Bannister had worked years before. The city desk was set at a different angle. Bannister recognized none of the men gathered around it. Desks and cabinets covered most of the floor space. They had been rearranged, too, but the room had the same air of activity, of disorder and preoccupation that he remembered. From beyond came the muffled roaring and whining and grinding of machines. Oh, it was all quite familiar.

Down came the outspread pages of a newspaper. Down came the tipped-back chair. A young man with a brown felt hat tipped back at a rakish angle upon a head of very red hair emerged from behind the newspaper. He crushed out his cigarette and got to his feet.

"Yes, Mr. Paxton," said J. Randolph Galney. "Sure! Is there anything—?"

He did not finish the sentence. A pair of eyes of unusual blueness searched Paxton's. J. Randolph Galney was slender and slightly below average height. His cheeks and the ridge of his nose were amply sprinkled with the freckles that so often accompany red hair and a fair skin. J. Randolph Galney was 22 years old but he had packed into those 22 years a list of activities that was amazing. Confidence and energy he never lacked. One subject, and only one, was there on which J. Randolph Galney was susceptible to the world's darts and that, at least in the office of the newspaper, was unguessed. No one on the Post knew that the "J" in the wirey little reporter's name stood for Jeremiah. No one would ever know it if it were possible for J. Randolph Galney to prevent it.

"Galney," Jim Paxton was saying, "this is Mr. Bannister—David Bannister. Used to work here. Since then he's been to New York and written some novels and made a name for himself. Been to Mexico, too, and Hollywood and I don't know where all."

A cheerful grin overspread the reporter's face. "Sure," he said. "I saw the picture they made from 'Cheerful Liar.' Called it 'Slave of Desire,' didn't they? It was a good picture, too. I heard that you were in Tremont—"

"Wait a minute," Paxton said. "I'd better get Austin. Austin was the assistant city editor, carrying on in place of his chief."

In another moment the four men stood together while Paxton explained Bannister's status as a sort of ex-officio member of the staff. Austin was nodding understandingly and Galney looked perplexed. Some of this perplexity faded as Paxton repeated, "It's still your story, Galney. Bannister's not to write any of the copy. He's to work with you, take part of the burden. Who's down at headquarters now, by the way?"

"Cunningham," Austin informed him.

"I came in to write the lead," Galney explained. He glanced at the clock on the opposite wall—a quick, nervous glance. "Guess I'd better be getting back," he went on.

"Bannister will go with you," Paxton spoke tersely. "And see if you can't get something this time! Make Henley talk. He must have something he's holding back! Try to get the description of that girl they're looking for. How do they expect to find her if they don't let us know what she looks like? For God's sake, give us something new for the final—!"

A telephone shrilled, interrupting. A loud voice called, "Austin! It's Cunningham on the wire. From headquarters!"

The assistant city editor ran to the desk and picked up the instrument. "Hello, hello!" he said nervously. "Yes—this is Austin."

The others drifted nearer, as though drawn by an irresistible force. Now Austin was pulling copy paper toward him; one hand

MONEY FROM KING

"DEMANDING BY MENACES" ALLEGED

London, Nov. 29. Clarence Guy Gordon Haddon, consulting engineer, who recently returned from China, was formally remanded in custody until December 4. Bail was refused.

Chief Inspector Foster stated that when told of the charge, Haddon replied: "This is the only thing I wanted. I don't see why I should be hounded about for being the illegitimate son of the Duke of Clarence."

Later, Haddon denied the charge, but admitted he had made a petition to the King.

The prosecuting counsel intimated that it might be desirable to have a medical report on the prisoner.—Reuter.

SECRET FRENCH DEFENCES

CANBERRA HAS NO REPORT OF FRENCH ACTIVITY

Canberra, Nov. 29.

The Government has no knowledge of any secret French bases in the Pacific, stated the Hon. Mr. John G. Latham, Attorney-General and Minister for External Affairs, when questioned to-day in the House of Representatives.

Mr. Latham was replying to queries which followed the report in a Sydney newspaper that France was building Pacific fortifications secretly and preparing her Pacific harbours for the reception of big ships.

The same paper said that Japan was scouting for strategic points to fortify, and drew attention to the London Naval Treaty to which Japan, but not France, is signatory.—Reuter.

MODERN COURAGE

THE KING AND THE V.C.

The fact that the King himself examines every recommendation for the award of the Victoria Cross was revealed by Lord Harwood, husband of the Princess Royal, at the second re-union of Yorkshire V.C.s at Boston, Leeds.

Lord Harwood said that the reason why the V.C. had remained ahead of all other honours was because its award was so rare and was made only after the strictest scrutiny.

He was glad to be able to say that personal courage was alive today, but the amount of courage and self-sacrifice needed to win the Victoria Cross was exceptional and rare. It had been even more difficult to win the V.C. in the Great War than in previous wars.

A number of officials scrutinised every case of recommendation for the coveted Cross, and then it went before the King in person.

The King himself, Lord Harwood added, had told him that he personally examined every recommendation before he allowed it to go through.

"He is very jealous, if I may say so," said Lord Harwood, "to guard the Cross with great care." "It has become the fashion in modern times to look upon personal courage as a virtue of comparatively little importance; in fact there is even a school, which seems to consider personal courage as almost a vice," he continued. "But I am glad to think that it is a very small section, although it is loud-voiced."

Lord Harwood declared that he was certain that 999 men out of 1,000, if asked what honour they would have above all others, would choose the Victoria Cross.—Reuter.

NEW CHILDREN'S COURT IN ENGLAND

NO DOCK, NO WITNESS BOX, NO NONSENSE, BUT CONSIDERABLE HUMANITY

By J. L. HODSON

Justice, tempered with true kindness. No nonsense, but considerable humanity. That was my impression of the first court which sat under the new Children's Act at Islington Town Hall.

The court was not much like a court. No dock, no witness box. The two magistrates, Mr. John H. Harris, of Thames Police Court, who, with his aquiline features, might be a parson or a school master, and Mrs. Gilling, a former Mayoress of Shoreditch (a woman must be on the Bench) sat at a horse-shoe table.

Evidence was given from a "lectern" by (in one instance) a policeman in brown shoes and blue overcoat.

On one side of the room sat County Council special officers, men of dignity and middle-age, and on the other probation officers of the girl guide leader or scout-master type.

The Health Factor

Mr. Harris said in some opening remarks that the Court started a new era. The incident that struck me most was when he told a girl's mother: "Your child's teeth want attending to. Health has very often a great deal to do with it, you know."

He pointed out to another parent that her daughter had a flat foot, and that one of her eyes was defective. It will be customary under this new Act, I gather, for the magistrates to inform the parents of defects disclosed by the medical report. It is an important innovation.

Another is that a parent or guardian must be present in Court and has power to cross-examine witnesses.

Three Boys in a Kiosk

The first case was of three boys charged with stealing from a telephone kiosk an earpiece, diaphragm, washer and screw, worth 4d. "Were you in this?" asked the clerk (a friendly young man hardly out of his twenties) of one boy, obviously endeavouring to make him feel at home; and when Mr. Harris spoke to them he used their christened names.

The spokesboy said they entered the kiosk to have a bit of fun—telephone the operator and ask him the time.

Mr. Harris: But that would cost you twopence.

The boy: Oh no you dial O. But it wouldn't work.

The magistrates decided there was no evidence of stealing. "Now you three lads were extremely stupid," said Mr. Harris. "It is poor fun for the chap at the other end of the telephone who is busy all day answering calls. Go away and keep out of telephone boxes."

Two girls who had been found guilty of stealing from Woolworth's came into the room next. What troubled Mr. Harris gravely was that although it was plain, he said, that they had worked together, each had since said: "It wasn't me, it was the other girl."

"It is a rotten thing to go and say that," he said. "Far better to be straightforward." He spoke as an indignant parent speaks when rebuking his children.

The girls he admonished severely; and if they "did it again" they would be "sent away." But they must forget about the case. The probation officer would look after them. "She will make a friend of you, if you will make a friend of her."

A Difficult Problem

The third boy was a more difficult problem; he had stolen wages, and taken a trip to the Isle of Wight. This boy had been stealing since 10 years old, was under average intelligence.

The mother, with whom Mr. Harris discussed the case, thought, with him, her son would be better away at "a school," and to a school he was sent.

Formerly, I understand, it was usual to fix a term of three years or until the age of 19 was reached. Now the period is to be left to the discretion of the headmaster of the school and the Secretary of State.

REPLY TO CRITICS

N.S.P.C.C. & Safeguards for Parents

Answers to criticisms of the new Children and Young Persons Act were given by officials of the N.S.P.C.C. at a luncheon, under the chairmanship of Lord Ullswater, at the Savoy Hotel recently.

The Act gives power to local authorities, constables or authorised persons (the Society's inspectors come under this category) to bring children before special courts if they are in bad association, moral danger, or beyond control.

The magistrates are empowered to take a child from the custody of its parents and place it in custody of an approved school or relative, or under supervision, at home, without any criminal charge being made.

Mr. Frank Whitbread, vice-chairman of the Society, made it clear that the N.S.P.C.C. regarded the Act as a great advance. If the Society had not been satisfied that there were obvious safeguards against the parents being arbitrarily deprived of their children, they would have opposed it.

These safeguards he enumerated as the right of immediate appeal from the Children's Courts to the Quarter Sessions, and the subjection of magistrates' decisions to Home Office supervision.

Mr. William J. Elliott, the director of the Society, said there was no intention of flooding the new courts with cases. Proceedings were held in camera only to ensure a degree of intimacy in the child's interest.

Mr. Elliott admitted that the cost of appeal to the Quarter Sessions would be at least £20, a sum prohibitive in the case of poor families. There was still, he pointed out, direct access to the Home Secretary, and he gave an assurance that the Home Office paid every attention to such letters.

NATIVES' ORDEAL

TELL OF FIGHTING 100 WOLVES

Ketchikan, Alaska. Back to back, Henry and Eli Bine, Metlakatla natives, assert that they battled for an hour with 100 wolves on Duke Island. They say that the wolves crowded so close that they snapped at their rifles. Eli declares he took careful aim at what appeared to be the leader of the pack and killed it. As soon as the leader fell, he went on, the pack crowded about it and dragged the body away.—Reuter.

Why Germany Spurned Powers' Armament Plan

WHAT GERMANY WAS OFFERED

NO TANKS	102,000 RIFLES $1,428,000	252 TRENCH MORTARS $94,500	NO PLANES	MUNITIONS $935,480
	1962 MACHINE GUNS $1,008,000	288 LIGHT ARTILLERY $535,200

WHAT GERMANY DEMANDED

300 TANKS $4,200,000	102,000 RIFLES $1,428,000	252 TRENCH MORTARS $94,500	1,120 LIGHT AND HEAVY ARTILLERY $3,428,000	300 PLANES $1,500,000	MUNITIONS $234,480
	4,462 MACHINE GUNS $2,304,000

This sketch shows the wide variance in the amount of rearmament offered to Germany by the great powers and the amount demanded by Germany. The disagreement provoked Germany's withdrawal from the League of Nations and threatens to wreck the world's peace machinery. The dollar prices, in gold dollars throughout, are estimates of the costs of the armament in the U. S.

CINEMA SCREENINGS

The wild beasts of the zoo—smiling behind the bars of their cages in the Carnivora House—are the witnesses of the screen's newest and most ingenious death method in Paramount's "Murders in the Zoo," which is opening to-morrow at the Queen's and is featuring Charlie Ruggles, Lionel Atwill, Kathleen Burke, Randolph Scott, John Lodge and Gail Patrick. A new insidious killer slithers across the screen in this terrifying drama of death upon death. It is the fatal Green Mamba, scourge of the jungle, feared alike by men and beasts on the Dark Continent from whence it comes to give screen audiences the merry old fitters. But the Green Mamba is merely the living symbol of the machinations within the distorted mind of Eric Gorman, played by Lionel Atwill. He portrays one of those "bring 'em back alive" animal collectors who, more often than not, sends his human opponents home dead. It is his insane jealousy of all who looks upon his beautiful wife (Kathleen Burke) that is responsible for his evil purposes, and still more evil actions. When, in the opening sequence, he sews a man's lips together because this friend dared, in a drunken moment, to kiss Atwill's wife, the audience wonders what more imposing punishment may be devised for the man's later victim. Charlie Ruggles furnishes the comedy relief most effectively. He thoroughly enjoys the role of Peter Yates, dithering press agent to whom animals are anathema, yet who, nevertheless, grabs the berth of exploitation man for the zoo as his last chance. The picture's check full of action from the opening murder to the closing roar of the loosed lions, tigers, panthers and leopards who unwittingly provide the only possible satisfactory conclusion to "Murders in the Zoo."

"The Conquerors"

Hollywood has kept faith with a public that has nursed the motion picture since its nickelodeon birth. From the celluloid mills has come a film production that dares to honestly portray an undiscussed but romantic era in the history of the United States. It is the RKO's Radio Picture, "The Conquerors," which is now playing at the Theatre with Richard Dix and Ann Harding in the co-starring roles. Here at last, is something on the screen that every man, woman and child should see. It is powerful and stirring flesh-and-blood document of what America has faced and survived during three major depressions since 1873. Historical highlights, from the time Alexander Graham Bell invented the telephone up to the time Lindbergh spanned the Atlantic, go hurtling by on the screen in the midst of an intensely absorbing romantic progress participated in by Richard Dix and Miss Harding.

"Pilgrimage"

Ever since Heather Angel became a star of the stage and screen in London her admirers have thought that her name was one adopted for professional purposes but her mother, Mrs. Andrea Angel, is authority for the statement that the young lady has had no name other than Heather Angel since that February 9 when she was born in Oxford, England. Miss Angel's father was Andrea Angel, a chemist and professor at Oxford, who lost his life in the World War. Her first American screen appearance is in "Pilgrimage," the Fox production with Henrietta Crossman, Norman Foster and Marian Nixon. The film, directed by John Ford, comes on Sunday next to the King's Theatre.

"The Rebel"

Those who have seen "The Rebel," the Universal Special now playing at the King's Theatre, remark on the excellence of the photography, the unusual camera angles, the sheer beauty of the Tyrolean panorama rendered doubly exquisite by the camera's magic. Great pains were taken by Paul Kohner, associate producer for Universal, to secure the very best available talent in Europe to photograph the picture. Sepp Algier, one of the most famous camera men, who was responsible for the beautiful camera work on "The Doomed Battalion," was engaged to photograph most of the exteriors of "The Rebel". In addition to Algier, the camera staff included Albert Behnitz and Willi Golberger, both experts in their line. Luis Trenker, who is starred in "The Rebel", and who also is co-author and director of the production with Edwin H. Knopf, has Vilma Banky and Victor Varconi in the principal supporting roles.

I'm Very Sorry.....!

You have been looking forward to the party for days and then a heavy cold compels you to cry off..... sneezing, coughing, snuffling and wretched you have not dared to go.

A few Respiroids taken at the first indication of the approaching trouble would have made a difference. These pleasant-tasting lozenges, when held in the mouth and allowed to dissolve slowly, emit antiseptic vapours which, circulating through the respiratory organs, dispel the germs of colds before they have got a grip.

Many a cold can be arrested in its early stages by the use of Respiroids. After a cold has developed Respiroids will still be found beneficial, as they help to break up the phlegm congested in the throat and lungs, relieve sore throat, and clear the nasal passages. WORLD WAITING FOR GERMANY

Rome, Nov. 29.
No progress in disarmament is possible until Germany states her claims, according to authoritative sources here, expressing the Italian view on the present impasse in Europe.

There is no foundation for the report that Premier Mussolini is contemplating the formation of a Seven Power Group, including Japan, to assure world peace. Such a suggestion was given prominence in many foreign newspapers recently.

It is understood, however, that Signor Mussolini desires a revision of the League of Nations, with a view to obtaining membership of the United States and Russia and the return of Japan to the fold. No proposals have been made as yet, as the time is considered inopportune in consequence of the present international tension.

If such a scheme as Signor Mussolini contemplates were effected, seven great Powers would join the League Council, logically, it is believed. This argument has evidently given rise to the report of a Seven Power Pact, it is suggested here.

Meanwhile, it is understood that Sir Eric Drummond's conversations with Signor Mussolini did not mention any such scheme. The talks were confined to Germany and France reaching some agreement on the Disarmament plan and procedure for proposed bi-lateral conversations advocated by Sir John Simon.

All parties here are eagerly awaiting the return of Herr Hassell, the German Ambassador, as he is supposed to be bringing Chancellor Hitler's latest proposals.

Litvinoff's Visit.
It is understood the primary reason for M. Litvinoff's visit to Rome is the formal ratification of a Russo-Italian pact of friendship and non-aggression, which was initiated earlier in the year.

Questions likely to be discussed during his sojourn here, however, include Disarmament. A general appeasement to fears on the Russian frontiers, would be a powerful stimulant to general disarmament, it is felt.

It is likely that an Eastern Mediterranean bloc, consisting of Italy, Russia, Turkey, with a benevolent Greece, will be discussed as well. This idea has recently progressed considerably.

Italy is anxious to increase her imports of Russian raw material in exchange for machinery, textiles and other manufactures, and this will probably be another ground for conversation.

Signor Mussolini is desirous of drawing Russia out of her isolation and bringing her back into the comity of European nations. Here, then, is another avenue of contact which may be explored.—Reuter.

EMPIRE TRADE AND ECONOMICS

Advocates of closer Imperial economic and trade relations have an ardent supporter in Mr. Stanley Bruce, the High Commissioner for Australia in London, who comes out with a strong plea for greater co-operation than has resulted from the Ottawa Conference. There is no denying the fact that the Ottawa discussions and decisions have not turned out to be so advantageous as was anticipated, due to a variety of circumstances which need not at the moment be outlined. Nor can it be doubted that, given the will, Britain, the Dominions and some of the Colonial Empire could achieve an economic union which would be productive of much mutual benefit all round. As Mr. Bruce pointedly declares, the Mother Country possesses a valuable home market, great supplies of capital and unrivalled experience, while the Dominions and other parts of the overseas Empire have the resources which Britain herself lacks. Co-operative effort, well planned to meet the needs of each and all, could undoubtedly produce results. With world depression still making its effects keenly felt, it is natural that there should be this inclination to turn attention to the possibilities of closer and more effective Imperial relationships. The Times recently suggested that Britain could not wait indefinitely on the permission of other nations to set her own house and the Empire in order, while General Smuts, in complete contrast to his address at the opening of the World Economic Conference, has since declared that progress might be easier, even in respect of world co-operation, if, in the first instance, radical reforms were begun in and confined to already existing economic units and regions. There is something in the contention that a start with in the Empire might, in course of time, be reflected in improved world trade generally, although the point must not be lost sight of that, once real Empire became an accomplished fact and showed results, there would be a tendency for it to become crystallised into something like permanency. If, however, the movement is to be seriously considered, something more than mutual tariff concessions and trade agreements will be necessary. The financial factor, can-

NOTES OF THE DAY

BRITISH AIR POWER

The debate on British air power is the culmination of one of the most vigorous political campaigns of recent years. And what is more, the Government can offer little defence to the demand for a considerable strengthening of Britain's military air power. The unrest in Europe has brought the issue to a head, but there are other factors which have played their part, including the recent combined air and naval manoeuvres in the North Sea and the realisation that Britain can no longer regard itself as an island separated from the Continent. Air development has renewed all that.

PLANES OR WARSHIPS?

What has yet to be determined, however, is the relative importance of the air force, the navy and the army in any modern scheme of defence. The issue is now raised very definitely, namely, can even the best modern warship withstand attack from the air. Has the aeroplane beaten the warship? There is a growing school of thought fully convinced that this represents the truth of the situation, and it is natural that they should point to the fact that 500 planes, including 300 torpedo-carrying machines, could be constructed at the cost of one H.M.S. Rodney. Expert opinion is that even a squadron of warships could not withstand the attacks of such a fleet. Hence yesterday's spirited debate. It is at once obvious that greater air power is essential to British defensive equanimity and that a large programme of naval building must be embarked on with the greatest caution. The aeroplane will certainly oust the submarine in importance in coastal defence schemes.

HOLLAND AND LEAGUE

Holland for many years has made itself the spokesman of the smaller powers at all League of Nations Conferences. It was Holland, for instance, that was the protagonist of the League Covenant during the Manchurian crisis. It is Holland that has always stood out for real limitation and reduction of armaments as an outcome of the Disarmament Conference. It was Holland that proposed the Tariff Truce and has always been a supporter of free trade by the removal of artificial barriers to the flow of commerce. If it was also Holland that took the first step in the destruction of the Truce she cannot well be blamed after the complete failure of the World Economic Conference.

OUTSPOKEN COMMENT

And that the Dutch Government does not speak for itself alone but has the backing of the nation is shown by recent editorial comment in the New Rotterdam Courier. "What must strike public opinion," it writes, "each time that important questions are discussed, is the stubborn egotism of certain nations, and notably of the Great Powers, who prevent the conclusion of the very agreements whose pressing need they continually proclaim." This tendency the paper goes on to remark was manifest at the World Economic Conference "where everybody knew exactly what his neighbour ought to do—which was precisely that, which they did not dare to undertake themselves." Turning to Disarmament in a deliciously cynical passage, the Courier declares that "States are always ready to abolish these categories of armaments which they do not themselves possess. They are afraid to take risks and seem to be entirely oblivious of having foretold that a failure of the Conference would produce disastrous results."

TRUE PRINCIPLES

"The fact is that the world is full of reformers who know exactly what everybody else ought to do to make life happier and more secure. But they are mysteriously missing when there is any talk of applying these principles to themselves." Homo truths from small Powers can sometimes be very salutary and we could do with more of them. Those who have great riches and it hard to see clearly. To the little nations, the League is a definite life-line of safety. Its Covenant stands between them and absorption by bigger and stronger nations. Herein lies the strength of Geneva, and herein is a most salutary means of keeping true principles constantly before the Great Powers who are immediately prepared to compromise on them in face of unexpected developments.

not be overlooked. There must be something like central control of finance, so that money may be directed into useful channels instead of being merely profitably employed for the benefit of the banks. In a word, State control of banking would appear to be a necessity. Given that, and a determination to secure maximum results from co-operative effort, economic Imperialism might easily be realised, to the mutual benefit of all parties.

SAINT ANDREW:

A SCOTTISH STORY OF HIS LIFE

IN the University Library, Cambridge, is housed an ancient Scottish manuscript which, even though it has been included in the publications of the Scottish Text Society since 1896, does not appear to be familiar to any except a small company of scholars.

This document consists of a series of lives of the saints and apostles and is couched in rhymed Scots of the fourteenth century, that older dialect which, with all its remoteness, bears a closer resemblance to the modern Scottish tongue than the later phrases of Dunbar or Douglas. It is manifestly drawn from "The Golden Legend," as its writer admits, but who that writer was, save that he was an ecclesiastic and well stricken in years, internal or other evidence fails to enlighten us.

But the individual point of interest is that the manuscript contains the only account of the legend of Saint Andrew, the patron Saint of Scotland, which has come down to us in the Scottish tongue. As such it should be infinitely precious and a brief resume of the legend it narrates may possibly induce the reader to seek out the volumes containing it and peruse it in the original for himself—a task not too difficult for anyone who has a smattering of Scots and a little Chaucerian lore, especially if he lean on the ample glossary provided by the learned editor.

St. Andrew, says our anonymous author, whose rude rhymes scarcely constitute even an attempt at tolerable versifications, was the brother of St. Peter, and after the dispersion of the apostles, took his way to Nischnia or Nicea, but was commanded by an angel to proceed to Murgundy, a town of the anthropophagi or man-eaters, for the purpose of relieving Saint Matthew, who had been blinded and imprisoned there. Taking ship, he duly arrived in that country, to find that Matthew's sight and liberty had been miraculously restored to him.

EVIL SPIRITS BANISHED.

His preaching of the Gospel in Murgundy aroused the enmity of its barbarous inhabitants, who seized and scourged him well-nigh to death. But the saint, through his piety and prayers, converted thousands to the Christian faith. Thence he passed to Antioch, where he wrought many miracles, and even the idol of the goddess Diana testified to the efficacy of the faith he inculcated, assuring her suppliants that she had no power to aid them, but that Saint Andrew would "help them secretly."

Perhaps the most notable among the saint's miraculous deeds was the casting out of seven fierce fiends at Nicea, to which he had retraced his steps. These evil spirits haunted a highway in the vicinity of the town, appearing in the form of hounds, as did so many medieval demons, and attacking and slaying passers-by. Confronted by the saint, they assumed a meekness which surprised the onlookers, and, at his bidding, immediately vanished, to the great edification of all present.

and who became his attached follower. The next miracle, or "ferlie," as our rhyming biographer terms it, in which the Saint engaged was the restoration to life of forty men who, coming by sea to hear his doctrines, had been drowned in a tempest raised by the foul fiend, and their bodies cast on the shore, where they were restored by his prayers.

Sailing to Achaia, or Greece, the apostle—for he was the first who had been called to that divine office by the Redeemer—engaged in the conversion of its inhabitants, baptising, among others, the wife of a certain Egeas, who, in revenge, persecuted the converts Andrew had made. Confronted by the Saint, he was admonished and enjoined to give up the worship of idols, which are "bot fendis" of which man must beware. The exhortation embraces a touching and almost eloquent account of the Last Supper and the betrayal by Iscariot, which owes not a little of its serene beauty to the simplicity of the old Scots in which it is couched.

But Egeas was contumacious, and all Saint Andrew's divinely inspired arguments failing to move him, he cast the apostle into prison, whence he was taken for trial and was condemned to death.

He was bound to a cross with cords, and it is interesting to note, in view of the particular form of the cross we now call a "Saint Andrew's" or decussate cross, that its precise shape is not mentioned in this Scottish account. At the height of his agony a divine light descended from above and enveloped him about, until he yielded up the ghost.

Even after his death the apostle continued to work miracles, protecting a certain bishop from the temptations of a demon in the form of a fair lady.

A NAVAL FLAG.

It is, indeed, remarkable that this long poem of over 1,100 lines makes no mention of Saint Andrew's association with Scotland as the patron Saint, a circumstance that could not fail to have been within the knowledge of its compiler. The national predilection for this Saint seems to have been very much more ancient than his official adoption as patron of the Scottish Kingdom. In the Irish Book of Leinster he is compared with Saint Columba, and as his attributes are practically identical with those of that Saint, this may account for his great popularity with our fathers.

Saint Andrew was the apostle of Scythia, and the Scots, or "Scutis," were anciently confounded or associated with the Scythian race. In Germany he is symbolically connected with the dog, which seems to throw some light on the legend of his exorcism of the demonic hounds.

The decussate cross of Saint Andrew, employed as an ensign, did not come into general use until the fifteenth century, when it was flown almost entirely as a naval flag. Many of the old views of the harbour of Leith represent it as sheltering vessels all of which fly the Saint Andrew's Cross. It is the popular as apart from the Royal standard of Scotland, but not the slightest proof exists that it is of older provenance than the lion rampant, the legend of the Pictish King Hungus notwithstanding.—LEWIS SPENCE.

The Very Idea!

WHAT DID WE DO IN THE GREAT WAR?

By Maj. Gen. Edward Kelly.

"SHUN!" We leapt smartly to attention, awaying slightly from side to side until our body had recovered from the momentum.

Our hat fell off with the sudden shock, but we didn't care. Our hair was parted solidly with grease and our fingers were stretched along the seams of our pants.

We allowed a faint, cynical smile to play along our lips. Nothing ostentatious—just one of those smiles that make girls fall for us.

Ah! This was LIFE Working for our King and Country. Taking our part in the defence system of our grand and glorious Empire. Enduring the same hardships that our brave Tommies underwent in the Great War.

We are referring, of course, to the fact that we were at Fauling camp last week-end.

We threw our shoulders back, and allowed another faint smile to flit across our features.

Away from the irksome office routine, we felt a new man. Let them bring out our enemies. We

"Private Kelly!!!" boomed a voice, "Wheresyerat? Picktupman! Don't stand there mooning like an ape. An' wipe that silly grin off your face."

We retrieved our hat, and regained our stance, a little shaken.

"Feet pointing outwards to an angle of 45°!" roared the same obnoxious voice, and our feet painfully described the requisite arc. Ingrowing toenails and corns placed at strategic points did not help.

However, it's all in the life of a warrior, we thought, and gave ourself a surreptitious scratch in the rear-guard.

After all, soldiers must put up with some discomforts. Our only regret was that it would all end to-morrow. If only we could fight. Our manly bosom.

We completed the difficult manoeuvre with dignity, thanks to a kindly kick on the ankle from our neighbour.

"Quuu-u-e-e-e-c-k MARCH!" We stopped off briskly with our left foot, and, excepting that we dropped our rifle, trod on the heel of the fool in front, and had the silly cow behind trod on ours, went through the evolution with precision.

The man's voice was growing monotonous.

After an indeterminate time, the Camp hove into sight. We crawled along, the stock of the rifle joggling into our skinned shoulder with each step.

"Sq—u-a-a, 'ALT!'"

The ranks steadied, and we curled our toes up in our boots, seeking relief from the burning sensation.

"That's all now, men. We'll do another route march this afternoon," said the same abominable voice.

One unit looked up at the sky and hoped it would rain.

We were dismissed, and crawled wearily away to our tents.

"Old Soldiers Never Die—sang a raucous voice in a neighbouring tent.

TO MAKE PIN-MONEY

Go up to a chap and say, "For two pins I'll—knock-you—flat." When he's given you two pins knock him down and then try someone else. Keep this up till exhausted.

GREAT AIR FLEET MAY HAVE TO BE BUILT A Force As Strong As That of Any Other Power

BRITAIN GIVES AIR WARNING

INFERIORITY CANNOT CONTINUE

BUT HOPES FOR AN AGREEMENT

LONDON, NOV. 29.
THE DEMAND FOR TEN THOUSAND MILITARY AEROPLANES WAS NOT PURSUED VERY FAR IN THE DEBATE IN PARLIAMENT TO-NIGHT ON BRITAIN'S WEAKNESS IN AIR STRENGTH.

Lord Londonderry, in the Lords, and Mr. Baldwin, in the Commons, said that Britain must insist upon an air fleet as strong as any in the world, but it was hoped to secure parity by a scaling down of numbers in other countries.

Lord Londonderry.

If an agreement for reduction could not be obtained, the converse process must take place and Britain would be compelled to build a great air fleet.

With these assurances, the House of Commons rejected, without a division, the motion of Rear-Admiral Suetter, drawing attention to the "inadequacy" of the air defence of the Empire.

COMPARATIVE AIR STRENGTHS

The House adopted by 151 votes to 31, a motion by Wing-Commander James, supporting the policy of the Government embodied in the British draft convention.

Mr. Stanley Baldwin, winding up the debate, said that Britain could not stand alone in the world in her present position as regards defence either on air, sea or land.

The disarmament situation was delicate, he admitted, but no member of the Government had in any way lost hope and they were endeavouring to do everything possible to achieve an agreement.

NOT TO CONTINUE.

The Government's determination to continue to pursue a policy which aimed at achieving effective disarmament in air, was repeated in the House of Lords this evening by the Marquess of Londonderry, the Air Minister, but he added emphatically that they could not permit a continuance of Britain's present inferiority. The statement was made in a debate raised by the Duke of Sutherland, who asked for information regarding Britain's relative aerial strength in comparison with European Powers.

Lord Londonderry said the course the Government had consistently followed in connection with air disarmament was sufficient indication that they regarded the problem as of vital moment.

A race between nations in armaments was a policy that must be avoided at all costs and to this end all the efforts of the Government had been directed at Geneva.

It might be that the disarmament conference approached its task with idealism, which, in the present circumstances of the world, was no reason for censure, and it would be a disaster of the first magnitude if an agreement was not reached on the definite limitation of armaments at a level which satisfied the requirements of defence and denied to the potential aggressor the means of offence.

VAIST AIR FLEETS.

When the war closed Britain was the first air power in the world. After the Armistice, as an earnest of her pacific intentions and proof of the genuine character of her propaganda for the limitation of air armaments, she dispersed the greater part of her vast air fleets until the country was to-day the fifth only of the world air powers in terms of first line strength.

All countries had not made public statements of their current strengths, but the official figures were available for France and Britain.

THE FIGURES.

In Britain's case, the figure was approximately 850 aeroplanes. In the French air force, the corresponding figure was about 1,650.

According to available information, the Soviet Republic figure was between 1,400 and 1,500, the United States between 1,000 and 1,100, Italy between 1,000 and 1,100.

It was clear that Britain's example had unhappily elicited no response whatever in any quarter of the world. This was, therefore, a path which could no longer be followed and they must, however reluctantly, abandon the policy of unilateral disarmament which in the present unfortunate state of international affairs, it was manifestly not only useless but even dangerous to pursue further.

NO NEW POLICY.

That did not mean that a new policy would guide them, for the Government had made it plain in their successive pronouncements at Geneva that they recognised the need for a one-power standard in the air for this country. The earnestness of their desire to achieve effective disarmament in air had been abundantly proved by their approach to this problem and they had offered to go to any length if other nations would do the same. They had, indeed, stated their willingness to consent to the complete abolition of military and naval aviation, provided only there could be devised an effective scheme for the international control of civil aviation, which would prevent all possibility of the misuse of civil aircraft for military purposes.

OUTLOOK NOT GOOD.

It now appeared that there were nations which were not prepared to agree to such abolition and it was impossible to deny that there were great practical difficulties in the way of such a far-reaching measure. But Britain could not accept the continuance of her present inferiority.

If parity could not be secured by reductions elsewhere, then the converse of the proposition must follow and there would be no option but to begin to build upwards while continuing our efforts to secure an international agreement in fixing parity at the lowest level to which other nations would subscribe.

U.S. PROGRAMME.

Having referred to the programmes for increased air force in the United States, Japan and Russia, Lord Londonderry said they must hope it would be possible to fix a first line strength for the principal air powers which would neither be a threat to the peace of the world nor impose an intolerable financial burden.

Britain and the Empire as a whole must be made safe in the air, but a race in air armaments should be avoided at all costs. Appropriate steps to ensure this policy were at present engaging the attention of the Government.

FOUNTAIN PEN THEFT

GAOL TERM FOR SNATCHER

With a previous conviction for unlawful possession for which he served four months in gaol, Chan So, unemployed, appeared before Mr. Balguy at the Central Magistrate's Court this morning, charged with stealing a fountain pen from Fung Shu-chung, a recent arrival from Canton. He pleaded not guilty.

District Watchman Lam Pang said that at 3.15 p.m. yesterday in Connaught Road Central, near Hillier Street, he saw defendant following complainant. He slipped out to the left hand side of complainant, and putting his left hand across the right side, extracted the pen from the left lower jacket. When arrested the pen was in his hand. The victim was located and identified the pen.

Complainant said he arrived yesterday from Canton by the a.s. Tin Yat and was engaged in conversation with a friend on the Praya when he missed the pen. "When you come out of gaol, I advise you to get some employment," remarked his Worship in passing sentence of ten weeks' hard labour.

CHINA FLEET FOOTBALL

RETAIN DIV. I LEADERSHIP

A lucky win at the expense of H.M.S. Berwick consolidated H.M.S. Kent's position at the head of the first division of the China Fleet Football League, when the teams met at Happy Valley yesterday.

The Kent, who have now won three out of seven matches, yet remain undefeated, captured the points by the odd goal in five, after the Berwick had twice held the lead.

The losers enjoyed the greater share of the play, but could not force home their advantages.

Jones and Hamby on the wings put in some fine work for the Berwick, but even with Langmead in the middle, goals went begging.

FINE GOALKEEPING.

Hancock kept a magnificent goal for the Kent, and the opportunism of Green, together with the thrustful work of Hudspeth on the left wing, made the Kent attack very dangerous when on the move.

Morgan gave the Berwick the lead early on, but Green had a shot deflected into the net by Jenkins to level things up. However the Berwick again went ahead when Jones made use of a chance, but a half time lead was denied them, till scoring for the Kent.

The second half saw some fairly even exchanges, with the Berwick holding the advantage territorially.

The issue was put beyond doubt when Green snapped up a chance, and placed the Kent ahead for the first time. Teams:

Kent:—Hancock; Lockett and McLean; Schofield, Redman and Upson; Green, Bowles, Stevenson, Hills and Hudspeth.

Hold Berwick To A Draw

After being led two-nil at half time, the Medway recovered in great style against H.M.S. Berwick in a third division match of the China Fleet Football League yesterday at Happy Valley, and finally succeeded in forcing a draw of two goals each.

The Berwick thoroughly merited their half time advantage. They were vastly superior in the opening stages, and only the excellent goalkeeping of Leech kept the score down.

Braddon broke through quite early in the game to open the Berwick's account, and after some fast exchanges, Coombes, with a fine solo effort, added a second.

CLEVER WINGERS.

During this period the Medway were handicapped by playing one short, but later the team was completed, and they immediately began to get into their stride.

Clever work by their wingers, Tarr and Branton led to continual raids on the Berwick goal in the second half, and it was from Branton's pass that Hodgkinson reduced the deficit. Later Branton broke through himself to score the equalizer, completing an afternoon of splendid achievement. Teams:

Berwick XI:—Davis; Kean, Lake, Olliffe, Braddon, Williams; Worthington, Coombes, Kennedy, Broome, Parsons.

Medway XI:—Leech; Magill, Reeves; Barret, Robertson, Bright; Tarr, Donaldson, Elsey, Hodgkinson, Branton.

Mrs Moody Not To Play For Two Years

STATEMENT TO THE PRESS

San Francisco, Nov. 24.
Helen Willis Moody, outstanding woman tennis player, will not compete again for at least two years because of the displaced vertebrae that caused her to default in dramatic fashion to Helen Jacobs in the national finals in September at Forest Hills, L.I.

"Little Packer Face" said to-day she probably would not be permitted to swing a racket until 1935.

The announcement was not wholly unexpected as her father, Dr. C. A. Willis, said on Oct. 2 that she might have to relinquish her titles, including the Wimbledon crown she has won six successive times. He said only time would tell whether she would ever be able to take part again in tournament tennis.

Miss Willis herself however said two weeks later she hoped to return to competition next year. She was then out of the hospital and walked with difficulty with the aid of a cane.

When she defaulted to her fellow Californian, Miss Jacobs, in the national women's finals she was wearing a brace on her back. She said she believed she injured herself while lifting a stone on a camping trip last summer.

Miss Willis failed to defend her national title in 1932, when Miss Jacobs first won, and then defaulted this year.

THRILLING MATCH PROMISED

S. CHINA HALFBACKS MUST IMPROVE IF DEFEAT IS TO BE AVOIDED

TAY QUA TONG TO FILL LEFT WING POSITION

(By "Veritas").

"I consider the Navy the finest team in the League."

THUS the considered judgment of a leading local authority on football, and although I have no wish to assist in the development of an inferiority complex on the part of South China, I feel that this is what they will be up against on Saturday.

The Railway Ground promises to stage one of THE matches of the year, for with the meeting of the Navy and South China, we shall not only have brought together some of the most skilful footballers in the Colony, but there will be other influences at work to make the exchanges keener and more exciting.

The Navy will take the field brimful of confidence. They have struck a winning vein, are well in running for the leadership, and can back these factors with a team of talented players.

South China, on the other hand, have first to efface from memory their last two performances in order to start on level footing, and must then play a better type of football if they are to win.

So far as I know the Navy line-up will be the same as that which beat Kowloon with the exception of Buchanan, who has left for home. In which case Lau Mau and Li Tin-ang are going to be up against a big problem as presented last week by the Club attack.

THE BIG QUESTION.

Can the Chinese defence avert being swept off their feet in the first half? This will be one of the main questions. Last week they gave a negative answer, and it cost them two points.

Kowloon discovered to their cost how thrustful can be those eager Navy attackers. The fleet footed Hudspeth, aided by the clever schemings of Smith, and the forceful leadership of Langmead, require a defence well above the

But as my colleague "Wanderer" pointed out on Monday, it is the splendid balance of the Navy team which counts so much. This has been evidenced in the whole of their games this season.

Practically speaking there is not a weakness in the combination. An especially reliable half back line helps to tighten up a defence which has once or twice given signs of breaking down.

South China will assuredly have to be at their best to add the scalp of the Navy to their season's hunting.

THE RETURN OF TAY.

The Chinese have one consolation. Last week's left wing deficiency will be remedied by the return of Tay Qua-tong. Tay comes out of his suspension to-morrow, and is certain to be included in Saturday's team in place of Tong Kwan.

So that Parkins can look forward to a fairly busy afternoon.

In his only other previous appearance this season—against the Borderers at Sookunpoo—Tay revealed a turn of speed—truly astonishing. And if he can get What South China seem to have lost sight of is the fact that in Yeung Shui-ye they possess about the finest outside right in the Colony.

When I have claimed this in conversation it has been hurled back that he lacks experience and that he has not yet fully developed. Perhaps he may and confessedly he has not. But there is no gain-saying that Yeung has this season "produced the goods".

BRIGHT FUTURE.

I see an extraordinarily bright future for this young player. There is nothing stereotyped about his play. He's got tricks and he knows how to use them. His ball control could give points to many a more experienced player, and he can centre with either foot.

But if South China are to obtain full value from this clever youngster, Leung Wing-chui and Leung In-chun have got to show a little more consideration in their passes.

It has been the collapse of the half back line which has caused the deterioration of the Caroline Hill team these past two weeks.

Leung Wing-chui seems to have forgotten how to hand out those long sweeping ground passes of his which rarely failed to catch a defence napping, and there has been a general slovenliness about the whole work of the intermediate trio.

The necessary return to form in this department may possibly mean all the difference between two points and defeat.

But regarding it by and large, I hesitate to pronounce any definite attitude to the probable outcome of Saturday's match. Anything might happen, although I think the Navy will at least start the game with the balance slightly in their favour.

ROBERTSON AND SKINNER

Whether the Club's achievement a week ago was just a flash of inspiration, or whether it is to lay the foundation of a successful future will probably be determined when they meet St. Joseph's on Saturday.

The Club will be strengthened by the return of Robertson at right half and Skinner at centre-half.

Fogwell is still an absentee, but such an excellent deputy has been found in Lawson, that the "Blue and Whites" aren't worrying any. Albert Howe, the Club centre-forward, is a doubtful starter. He told me this morning that his injury is slowly yielding to treatment, but he cannot yet say whether he will be fit for Saturday.

If he cannot turn out I should not be surprised to find either Bell or George Duncan included.

Duncan has been leading the Club second eleven with distinction this year, and Bell is consistently the best of the reserves' forward line.

LAST WEEK'S STANDARD. NECESSARY.

If they can maintain last Saturday's standard, I favour the Club to beat St. Joseph's, because they always perform well at Caroline Hill. Though its rough surface makes it one of the most difficult playing pitches in the Colony, the Club have always managed to overcome the disadvantages.

Of course they will have no easier job in beating St. Joseph's than of South China. But the team is capable of big things.

Leonard has to be severely watched, but I shouldn't be surprised to see much of the sting taken out of Saints' attack by the subjugation of Gosano on the right wing.

Hynes and Robertson are capable of keeping a strict enough watch on Fernandez and Rocha.

A single goal will more than likely settle this issue, for St. Joseph's are just as strong in defence as the Club. If anything they enjoy a slight superiority.

KID CHOCOLATE FLOORED IN 2ND ROUND

New York, Nov. 24.

With a whirlwind attack, Tony Canzoneri, the recently-dethroned lightweight champion, flattened Kid Chocolate to the canvas in the second round here to-night before a howling crowd which never expected to see the Cuban bon bon take the count.

Chocolate, recognized in New York and other states as the world featherweight and junior lightweight champion, went down before a right to the head after two minutes and a half of the second stanza.

It was the only knockdown of the scrap which brought together two of the outstanding fighters in a non-title event.

Canzoneri started out fast seeking a quick kno of the Cuban and rocked him repeatedly in the first round. Chocolate then steadied temporarily but under a vicious attack became dazed and kept going only by the lightning instinct that has kept him at the top of the feather division for the last several years.

Canzoneri had a three-pound weight advantage, scaling 133 pounds to 130 for the little Cuban Negro.

Canzoneri last summer dropped his lightweight title to Barney Ross of Chicago and failed to regain it in a return match here in September, but is still rated at the top in his weight class. It was the first knockout of Chocolate. He was counted out as he lay face down on the canvas.

A King's Park Conundrum: Can Artillery Win?

'care to slip along to King's Park on Saturday you can see it worked out for yourself.

The answer will be supplied through the meeting of the Recoelo and Royal Artillery. So far both have made abortive searches for points. The Artillery have made half a dozen attempts to improve the position, two of which went very close to fruition, whilst the Recoelo have eight times left the field unappended.

I am afraid Saturday will be the ninth occasion!

Even without Harris, and with the experiment of Sergt. Woods at centre-forward, the Gunners should be good enough to break their duck. But they must open up their game. They do not move the ball quickly enough to indulge in short-passing. The wings should be kept constantly on the move. But that's up to Pardoo and his colleagues.

The Recoelo, who, as a team of enthusiastic triers, are second to none in the Colony will not take the field utterly despairing. They have played good games this season without any attendant luck. This supplied, and a little more confidence in themselves will make a lot of difference. So don't be surprised if they spring a surprise!

POSITION NOW SERIOUS

LINCOLNS & THE LEADERSHIP

Last week I asked, though not with very much conviction "Will the Lincolns suffer a decline?" Since their debacle against St. Joseph's the question must be repeated with more seriousness.

Like South China they have experienced two rather unhappy matches in succession. Whether the Lincolns will allow this completely to upset their equilibrium is, perhaps, rather premature to suggest. But if they are to remain in the race for league leadership, they cannot afford to drop many more points, and I imagine Sunday's game with the Police will decisively settle the issue one way or the other.

On form I cannot see how the Lincolns can lose, and, despite their disappointing displays of the last fortnight, my faith in them remains.

10 MINUTES FOOTBALL

LESSON FROM OVERSEAS

WHEN CLEVERNESS IS FUTILE

(By "Saracen")

Watching the Peru-Chile team, who recently played a series of matches in this country, one realized that cleverness was of little avail unless it had a direct purpose. All the swerving, side-stepping and intricate short passing has only a spectacular value unless it leads to the ball being put in the net.

But the methods of the tourists emphasized another point. Like most Continental teams they are largely passive in their resistance in defence. They don't go in to get the ball; they do not even challenge for it unless they have a good chance to secure it. The result of these tactics is that a man finds himself in possession in ample space and with time to do as he likes. Almost unopposed he falls to the temptation to dribble the ball forward with the opposition giving way, or retreating before him.

But finally he is compelled to pass and then he finds that all his colleagues who have moved forward in advance are covered. It is as if the defence have thrown up an unscalable wall in the penalty area and the attack breaks down before it. One lesson is to be learnt from this type of defence, which may be condemned as unsound but which is usually very effective when practised against British teams, who are unfamiliar with it. If advantage is to be taken of withdrawal of the defence in the middle of the field the situation must be exploited quickly.

That is to say instead of the man with the ball dribbling he ought to push it through to a colleague before he is covered. As we say, he should make the ball do the work. The same principle should be applied to the game under all conditions. Indeed its importance cannot be over-emphasized if the forwards are to have a chance to break through and it applies specially to the half backs. A half back is fortified in holding the ball long enough to "draw" an opponent, and possibly to attempt to beat him, but having done this he should not keep it a second longer.

A fast service of the ball in these circumstances is imperative otherwise the defenders will be given the opportunity to take up position to check the attack. It should also be realized that the pass should not be placed direct to the player. The ball ought to be kicked into an open space where a man may collect it before being challenged.

The line-up of the Athletic has been announced as follows:

The substitutes are Jimmy Pang, Taft Pong, Jerry Young and S. K. Chan.

UNFORTUNATE LOSS.

The local club has been unfortunate in losing the services of Jimmy Leong, their full-back and triple threat man, and Jerry Wong, at centre. Leong was the most experienced player in the side and around him the team was built up. Both men are leaving for Honolulu on the morning of the match and their absence will mean a great deal. Clarence Ching has been brought in in the place of Jerry Wong and Henry Young at full-back.

Bill Butt, the S.C.A.C. coach, is very pleased with the spirit and showing of the local lads in their practice to-date, especially in a game with a U.S. Navy team last Sunday when they came through with a win of 12 points to 7.

The Chinese players were much lighter than their opponents but better team work was the deciding factor. At the end of the first quarter no score was registered, but soon after the commencement of the second Jimmy Leong scored the first touchdown of the game over a tackle from the 4 yd. line.

In the same quarter, O'Brien, the Navy full-back, gave his side the lead with a touch-down which he himself converted. The S.C.A.C. obtained their winning touch-down through Eddy Chang, the star miniature quarterback (he

CHRISTMAS TIME IS MECCANO TIME.

Thousands of boys have definitely made up their minds that for them this Christmas is going to be a Meccano Christmas—Dad simply must get that Meccano Outfit! Well, Dad, it is up to you!

Meccano is the most thrilling of all hobbies for boys, and the only one in which the interest never fails. With a Meccano Outfit your boy can build practically anything he wants—a Travelling Crane, a Motor Car, a Traction Engine, an Aeroplane, a Locomotive, or any one of the hundreds of models illustrated in the Meccano Manuals of Instruction. In addition, he can build scores of others of his own invention.

Meccano will develop your boy's creative mind and help him to give practical shape to his own original ideas.

This year Christmas will not be complete for him unless he has Meccano.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGEYESTERDAY'S MARKET FIRM

According to Messrs. Swan Culbertson and Fritts, the New York market was firm yesterday. Business done 750,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—The market was firm due to the advance in the R. F. C. gold price and a decline in the U. S. dollar. Trading was most dull on account of the coming holiday, "Thanksgiving Day." Sellers were reluctant to sell except at rising prices. Buying demand slightly better.

Iron Age Magazine reports:—Steel production was reported at 28% of capacity.

Operations are running ahead of schedules and contrary to seasonal tendencies due to further upward revision of automobile production schedules, several rail orders and additional public works projects. Better demand advanced the price of scrap 9 cents to a level of $9.02 per ton. This is the first advance since the month of August.

Our New York office cable:—
Stocks:—The market reflected a pre-holiday balancing of accounts and reports of gradual business upturn. Wheat:—Argentina action advanced prices sharply. December liquidation is lightening on Government buying. Constructive side favored Cotton:—A narrow pre-holiday market with exchange the only factor. Some thinking cessation of cheapening the dollar possible on pending Government financing of December 15th. Spots continue dull but firm. Silver:—Continues to be influenced by bullish sentiment as a result of a further advance in the R.F.C. gold price. Opinion is that the cost of silver depends entirely on the dollar cross rate which is largely influenced by the operations of Argentina and American Government Agencies.

The R.F.C. gold price yesterday was $33.83, up 8 cents.

The Dow-Jones commodity index was 48.55, up 47.

The opening figure yesterday for the Dow-Jones Industrial average was 96.75.

Notice:—The American markets will be closed on Thursday, November 30th, "Thanksgiving Day," therefore there will be no distribution of quotations on Friday, December 1st.

REMARKABLE NEW MARRIAGE LAW

Bolgrade. A revolutionary new marriage law has been adopted by the Senate of the Serbian Orthodox Church.

It is designed to meet the case of entanglement arising from the reappearance of a husband or wife after they have been presumed dead and their partner has remarried.

On the reappearance of the first partner the person who has remarried may either remain with the second partner or return to the first without the formality of a divorce. The new law comes into force on January 1, 1934.—Reuters.

SCOTTISH BALL

ALL READY FOR TO-NIGHT

FEATURES OF THE DECORATIONS

Everything is now set for St. Andrew's Ball, the main social event of the Colony, to be held to-night at the Peninsula Hotel, under conditions which give promise of unbounded success. Under the Chieftainship of Mr. A. L. Shields, the Scottish community will be the hosts at a colourful gathering representative of the whole Colony.

Thanks to the energies of the Decoration Committee, under the able and experienced leadership of Mr. George Duncan, M.B.E., the main rooms of the Peninsula Hotel have been completely transformed, and those attending to-night's function will be delighted with the brilliant scene resulting from these efforts.

THE DECORATIONS.

The Rose Room and the Roof Garden have been most effectively decorated. The dais which has been erected for the use of the official guests is at the end of the Rose Room and immediately behind and above it is the crest of the Chieftain, draped in tartan and illuminated thistles. Around the walls of the room are hung various Scottish clan shields with illuminated thistles surrounding them.

At the far end of the Roof Garden is the shield of Macdonald of Clanranald, the clan of the Vice-Chieftain, Mr. MacKichan, also set off with illuminated thistles. At the other end of the room the crest of the local Society of St. Andrew hangs from the balcony, draped in tartan. As in the Rose Room, the walls are adorned by clan shields.

RELAYED MUSIC.

The orchestra will be accommodated on the balcony in the Rose Room and the music will be relayed by a repeater system into the Roof Garden where three large microphones are situated on the balcony and one on each side of the room. A transmitter is in place beside the official dais. The relay is being carried out by the Hongkong Telephone Company and the trials given this morning were more than satisfactory.

OTHER FEATURES.

The crest of the Chieftain has been placed above the Chieftain's official dinner table on the first floor, and the clan shield of the Vice-Chieftain above the table at which his private dinner party will sit. Both are illuminated with thistles.

A plaster figure of St. Andrew, standing nearly six feet high and mounted on the fountain in front of the hotel, makes an imposing spectacle. The base, which is covered with thistles, will be illuminated and spot lights will also be trained on it.

CHIEFTAIN'S DINNER PARTY.

Preceding the ball, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Shields will give a dinner party in the Peninsula Hotel at which the following guests will be present:—H.E. the Governor and Lady Peel, H.E. Admiral Sir Frederic C. Dreyer and

"Japan's Present Industrial Policy and the Economic Security of the Empire Incompatible"

SPEEDY ACTION DEMANDED

ABROGATION OF TREATY MUST COME SOONER OR LATER

GOVERNMENT POLICY

London, Nov. 29.

Visions of a bitter trade war with Japan were conjured up in the House of Commons to-night during a powerful onslaught on Government policy by Lancashire interests. Abrogation of the Trade Treaty was demanded.

"It will have to come sooner or later," declared Mr. Hammersley, "and it is better than it should come now when things are more or less normal than when a crisis has developed."

Mr. Runciman counselled caution and said the Government were determined to exhaust all other means before resorting to abrogation.

The resolution moved by the Lancashire M.P.s was passed by the House without a division.

DISHONESTY IN TRADE MARKS

Captain Fuller's resolution was modified in its final form. Originally, it was intended to move the abrogation of the Anglo-Japanese Trade Agreement and the restriction of Japanese trade competition in Britain, either by tariffs or embargoes.

The resolution finally moved by Captain Fuller urged the Government to state their intention (in the event of satisfactory quota arrangements not being made with Japan) to immediately take steps to minimise the competition of Japanese imports in the Home and Empire markets, if necessary freeing themselves from engagements hampering effective action.

NOT VIGOROUS ENOUGH. Captain Fuller, who represents the Arkwright division of Manchester in the House, complained that the Government's action hitherto had not been vigorous enough in view of the rapid intensification of Japanese competition.

He referred to India's commendable liveliness in dealing with the problem and urged that Britain follow India's lead.

NO LIMITS. The speaker contended that the Japanese themselves recognised the British claims and the truth of the fact that we were not competing with fair Japanese trading conditions.

We could not, he went on, accept should Japan's stipulation that any agreement should be limited to Britain, Palestine, Ceylon, East Africa and the Straits Settlements as the basis of a full discussion of the question.

Major H. A. Proctor, the member for Accrington, seconded the resolution and suggested that the Government should appoint a Director of Cotton and also an ad hoc committee of experts to hammer out means of enabling the industry to reorganise.

BARGAINING WEAPON. They might, he added, evolve a scheme enabling Lancashire to utilise Indian cotton and rural cotton, thus eliminating Japan's moral claim to a share of the Indian market and removing the greatest bargaining weapon that Japan possessed in the negotiations.

The debate showed that there was almost unanimity in the House on the issue.

Mr. S. S. Hammersley, who is one of the members for Stockport, prominently identified with cotton spinning, managing director of S. Norton, Limited, and a member of the Lancashire deputation to India, said he thought that Japan's present industrial policy and the economic security of the British Empire were incompatible.

RISK OF CRISIS. He expressed the opinion that the Anglo-Japanese Treaty would require to be denounced sooner or later, in which case, he suggested, the Government should denounce it under more or less formal conditions, rather than run the risk of waiting until there is any crisis.

Mr. Hammersley added that the proposal to use Indian raw cotton was not merely a pious platitude on the part of Lancashire. Lancashire was determined to use more.

WEST v. EAST. Mr. Walter Runciman, President of the Board of Trade, replying, could not, at the moment, see Lancashire gain very much if the Government denounced the Anglo-Japanese Treaty.

The Government wished to exhaust other means before embarking upon such a course. Britain and the whole of the Western countries were having great trouble with Japan and it might be necessary for them to stand together in a great economic cause.

FEAR OF ENMITY. For that reason, Britain was trying to impress upon Japan that it was better for them to live upon a friendly footing with Britain than to carry her actions so far as to arouse feelings of enmity.

Mr. Runciman, concluding, hoped that Japan and Britain would find a way to solve these problems by intelligence and ingenuity.

Captain Fuller's motion was agreed by the House, without dividing, after the speech by Mr. Runciman.

INDIAN PRECEDENT. In the course of his speech, Mr. Runciman, dealing with the effect on export trade of Japanese competition, said the Government had for very long time been kept fully informed of the position in Lancashire. They had been giving attention to the best and most profitable way of approaching the problems which increased Japanese competition involved.

When last before the House, the Government expressed itself in favour of an attempt being made by the industrialists themselves in the first place, and they had been justified by what had happened in India in the last four months. The fall of imports of English cloths in India was one of the greatest problems that had to be faced. The Indian boycott was now over, and Lancashire was about to regain some portion of the market lost during the boycott. Fortunately the industrialists who went to India were able to reach an agreement with the cotton producers.

There were other parts of the world where it was not so easy to deal with the situation, and in India itself they had not been able to dispose of the whole problem. Japan was a very large importer into India, and her imports had been going up year by year. The Indian Government was very much alive to the situation, and was in closest consultation with the representatives of Japan. If there was any delay in these negotiations, it had not been the fault of the British Government.

TRADE MARK INFRINGEMENT. Referring to unfair competition based on infringement of designs and trade marks, Mr. Runciman said this was matter which gave

FLYING CLUBS IN INDIA

SET-BACK IN LAHORE

Bombay. Flying is still in its infancy in India.

The number of flying clubs in India is about a dozen or even less.

The Bombay Flying Club is just five years old and has a membership of only 270, according to the latest annual report of the Club.

The operations of the Club during the year under review resulted in a loss of Rs. 4,655 (over £350/-). Nevertheless, Bombay is carrying on enthusiastically.

Laure, on the other hand, has done with flying, at any rate for the present.

The Punjab Flying Club is under liquidation and its affairs have come up before the High Court.

Justice Bakshi Tekchand was told that Rs. 4,000 (£300/-) had been spent on the Club.

"That's why the Club has gone into liquidation," said Justice Tekchand amidst laughter.

More than Rs. 1,000 (£75/-) had been "wasted on advertisements," said a member of the Club.

Allegations of mismanagement were made in the open court, according to the Lahore correspondent of the Evening News.—Reuter.

cause for a good deal of trouble, not in this country so much as elsewhere, for here the machinery for dealing with infringement of trade marks and copyright of designs was fairly complete. In some portions of the British Empire, however, goods had been imported from Japan bearing British names and British trade marks.

That was a form of dishonesty which any Government, whether in the East or West, ought to do its best to suppress. If it was necessary to take steps, and if the Government could be given material on which to take steps, they were prepared to take them, but he hoped that by making representations the necessary impression would be made on the minds of those in control of Japanese commercial affairs.

TREATY ABROGATION.

He did not see that there would be any advantage to Lancashire industry if they began, as was suggested in some quarters, by abrogating the Anglo-Japanese Treaty, which, he reminded the house, also affected some thirty other countries in the British Empire. He preferred first to exhaust all other means, but if they found it necessary to denounce the Treaty, then he would view the whole subject from a different point of view and with quite a different intent.—British Wireless.

EMBEZZLEMENT AT DODWELL'S

SALESMAN SENT TO PRISON

Ng Chung-see, alias Jones Wu, a salesman employed by Messrs. Dodwell & Company, was this morning sentenced to three months' imprisonment by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy, for having embezzled $1,107.50 from the firm between September 11 and November 15.

Mr. Horace Lo, appearing for the defence, said he had been instructed to plead guilty, and he asked for leniency. The accused, he said, was employed in the Company as an outdoor salesman, and, with the knowledge of his employers, had started a business of his own for selling cars belonging to the firm. Unfortunately he found himself embarrassed for money between the named dates and was foolish enough to be tempted to make use of certain monies which had come into his hands. He had since made full restitution. He did not fully realise the gravity of his act, and was very sorry for what he had done.

Mr. Lo asked that in these circumstances accused be given a chance as a first offender. Accused had a wife and six children. His brother, who was the proprietor of an import and export firm in Bonham Strand, would only be too glad to stand as a surety for him, should accused be bound over.

Mr. F. G. Nigel, appearing for Mr. A. W. Hayward, who represented the Company as the complainant, said accused had been employed in the firm for ten months. He had been instructed not to press the charge unduly, as the amount embezzled had been repaid.

Mr. Hamilton:—It seems to me that during the ten months he had been there, he has been robbing the firm for four months.

Mr. Nigel said the first occasion was on September 26 when accused took a sum of $307.50 in respect of the hire of a second-hand car, and the second occasion was on October 18 when he had taken a sum of $500 which was a first instalment for a car. The accused then informed the Company that he had been unable to get the contract signed, but in fact had collected the money from the purchaser as a first instalment, and had made out a receipt on an incorrect form.

Mr. Hamilton:—I have got to consider the public as well, whether the firm agrees to have him bound over or not.

Mr. Nigel then discussed the matter with Mr. Hayward, but Mr. Hamilton intervened saying he was not justified in binding the accused over. It was not, he said, as if the accused was a youth. If he had been about 20 years he would have considered binding over.

THE ELECTIONS IN SPAIN

Madrid, Nov. 26.

Leaving the National Palace after a conference with President Alcalá Zamora, Senor Martinez Barrios, the Spanish Prime Minister, said to press representatives: "Seeing that there were few protests received so far regarding the regularity of the election, the new Cortes will be constituted before long. As soon as it opens, the Parliament will have to take up the question of the budget and examine several extraordinary credit items which were not approved by the permanent finance committee of the Cortes. In spite of what is said in this connection,"—added Senor Barrios,—"I cannot hand in the resignation of the Cabinet as long as the Cortes is not constituted."

His Worship convicted all three defendants and bound them over for a year, the first and second defendants in bonds for $50 each and the third in a bond for $25.

HEAD OF FAMILY ASSAULTED

OLD MAN BEATEN WITH IRONS

As a consequence of two families being at loggerheads, three members of the Chan family, Chan Kwun-yam, Chan Hung-on and Chan Ping-on, appeared before Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning, on a charge of having assaulted Li Lal, an aged man, head of the Li family, at Gloucester Road on November 28.

Mr. Hamilton fined the defendants $25, or, in default, one month's imprisonment each, and bound over all the parties in bonds of $50 each to keep the peace for six months.

Detective Sergeant Fitches said there had always been trouble between the two families, and some time ago some members of the Li family had beaten up some members of the Chan family. On November 28, the three defendants saw the old man, and gave him a beating with iron implements.

FIERCE GUNFIGHT ROBBERS KILLED BY POLICE

Shanghai, Nov. 29.

A thrilling running gunfight was staged here this evening at the busy intersection of Connaught and Hart Roads when detectives fought with three armed robbers in a place goods shop.

The detectives, it is believed, surprised the gang, and challenged them while they were attempting to hold up the store. The robbers opened fire.

Momentarily the police were at a disadvantage, for they were taken somewhat by surprise. They returned the fire of the robbers as they ran from the store, and riddled one with bullets. He dropped dead, with six wounds.

Although police believed that their fire wounded the dead man's two companions, these escaped. A Chinese woman was wounded during the encounter, but there were no police casualties.—Our Own Correspondent.

FORMER BUS CO'S GARAGES
PASS TO NEW OWNER

After having been previously withdrawn on account of the reserve price not being reached, the six houses belonging to the Aberdeen Kai Fong Motor Bus and Transport Co., Ltd. (now in liquidation), at Nos. 6-11 Sai On Road, Aberdeen, with a piece of adjoining vacant land, the whole having an area of 13,420 sq. ft., were for the second time put up for auction at Messrs. Lammer's rooms yesterday.

The buildings during the existence of the late company were occupied as garages, the upper floors being let out as tenements.

At the upset price of $20,000, considered to be very much below their normal value, bids of $500 were called for, but only one was offered, this being by Mr. Ngan Shing-kwan, Managing Director of the China Motor Bus Co. (1933), Ltd.

He met with no opposition, and secured the property at $20,000. Mr. L. Lammer was the auctioneer.

NEGRO LYNCHED

MISSOURI MOB TAKES MAN
FROM GAOL

St. Joseph, Miss., Nov. 29.

A furious mob of 7,000 persons battered down the door of the gaol here to-day and lynched a negro youth, who had been charged with ill-treating a white girl.

This is the second time within a week that an American mob has taken the law into its own hands, and hanged a prisoner before he was convicted. The previous case was that of the alleged kidnappers held in prison at San Jose, Cal.

The Missouri mob acted swiftly and before troops of the National Guard, called out by the sheriff of St. Joseph, could muster to intervene. Army tanks were also rushed to the gaol in an attempt to disperse the crowd. They were too late.

The negro was severely beaten with clubs before he was lynched in the prison courtyard.—Reuter.

QUESTION OF USE OF BOXER FUNDS

London, Nov. 29.

Mr. William Nunn, M.P., in the House of Commons to-day, drew the attention of the Government to the fact that the Chinese Government was inviting tenders for four new ships for the Chinese coastal trade and suggested that the proceeds of the Boxer Indemnity Fund should not be used to compete with English shipping.

Sir John Simon replied that the development of the Chinese coastal shipping necessarily entailed competition with British shipping, but added: "I am satisfied there is ground for effective representations. I understand the orders will be placed in Britain."—Reuter.

Vice-Admiral E. A. Taylor,
the member for Paddington South, who fought the constituency in 1930 at an Empire Crusade, but became an official Unionist as a National Government candidate, has returned partially to his old love.

He now subscribes to the Beaverbrook scheme for Colonial Empire Economic Union with the United Kingdom.

In the House of Commons to-day, he made his first public plea for a Customs Union between Britain and the Crown Colonies.

QUITE IMPRACTICABLE.

Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister, Secretary of State for the Colonies, replied that the establishment of identical customs rates in Britain and the Colonies would be quite impracticable.

Admiral Taylor then urged that British manufacturers should be allowed to enter the Crown Colonies without tariffs.

Sir Philip Cunliffe-Lister recalled the existence of the British Preference and remarked that if the tariffs were abolished every Colony nearly would become a charge on the Exchequer. —Reuter.
